WAR SUMMARY OF THE LATEST EVENTS

Bagdad is almost within the grasp of General Nixon's Anglo-Indian army. An official statement from the War Office announces that on Monday, after a night march from Zeur, Gen. Townshend's division attacked the Turkish positions at Ctesiphon, eighteen miles from Bagdad. Severe fighting followed, lasting all day. The Turkish position was captured and 800 prisoners, and large quantities of arms and equipment fell into the hands of the victors. The British losses—2000 killed or wounded—indicate that the Turk put up a strong defence. General Townshend's force and the General Headquarters of the expedition slept upon the ground they had won. On Tuesday night the Turks returned and made a heavy counter-attack, which was successfully repulsed. On Wednesday lack of water rendered necessary the retirement of the British forces to the Tigris, three or four miles below the captured position.

With Bagdad a few miles up stream, and having full command of the Tigris, waterway, General Nixon should be able to reach his goal in a few days. His army is advancing on both sides of the river. Zeur is on the right and Ctesiphon on the left bank. During the past year Persia has effectively occupied the valley of the Tigris for a distance of 350 miles inland from the Persian Gulf. A large part of the Euphrates valley also is now firmly held. At Bagdad the rivers are but thirty miles apart, so that the capture of that city will involve absolute control of the two great waterways of Mesopotamia. General Nixon will be in Bagdad before the Kaiser can send effective relief upon reaching Constantinople.

Here is a heartening message from a member of the Serbian Government: "We are still retreating towards Albania, but we are not beaten. We will take the offensive as soon as the Franco-British troops are in sufficient numbers in Macedonia. I can assure you France and Britain are preparing big surprises, which will soon materialize in the Balkans." The surprises will be welcome, for their is little of Serbian territory now in occupation of the Serbs. The Government, which had recently been located at Prisrend, left that town Wednesday for Scutari, in Albania. Mitrovitz and Pristina, the last two towns of importance in western Serbia to yield to the invading Germanic armies, were occupied Wednesday, according to official despatches from Berlin. The line of the Serbian retreat is southeast.

The force which has been resisting the Bulgarian advance west of Nish is almost entirely cut off from the Serbian main army now gathering in the Kossovo plain for a final stand in western Serbia. This army is believed still to number 90,000 first-class fighting men, and it is quite within the bonds of possibility that it may force

MILITARY RECEPTION TO CAPT. HALL

ON HIS RETURN FROM THE FRONT

When it became known that Capt. Ernest Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. F. Hall and Corporal John Bentley were returning from the front for short rest, the mayor and citizens deemed it only fitting that Capt. Hall and Corp. Bentley should be tendered a fitting reception. A procession was formed at the armureries, headed by the Citizens Band, following were C. Company of the 80th Batt. under Major Gray, the Boy Scouts in charge (Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, the member of the council and a large crowd of citizens, and marched to the G.T.F. station to meet Capt. Hall on his arrival. After greeting his family and a number of friends, Capt. Hall was escorted to a waiting automobile and the procession was reformed and returned to the armureries. Mayor Gibbard called the meeting to order and explained that the absence of Corporal Bentley was due to the fact that he had been in Napanee on Sunday and had been ordered back to hospital in Kingston and though the mayor had requested the military authorities to permit him to come back to Napanee on the same train as Capt. Hall, the request was refused. Mayor Gibbard also made a touching reference to Pte. Kelvin Herrington, who had died in a Prisoner Camp in Germany, and for whom the flag on the municipal building was flying at half mast.

The mayor expressed his great pleasure in welcoming Capt. Hall back to his native town after nine months spent on the firing line at the front.

Mr. W. S. Herrington K.C., read an address of welcome, expressing the honor which the citizens felt in the fact that so many of our young men had listened to the call of duty and freely offered their services to the country among the first of whom was Capt. Hall.

Following is the address:

CAPTAIN HALL:—

On behalf of the Corporation and Citizens of Napanee I have been asked to welcome you back from the front. You were among the first to respond to the call of duty and tender your services to your King and Country. In these dark and distressful hours in the history of our Empire, Canada's brave mothers and wives have displayed a spirit of Spartan patriotism and I am sure that the hardships of the firing line have been borne by you with a lighter heart by reason of the support and encouragement you were receiving from your good wife and mother.

While many of your comrades have fallen in battle and others have been invalided home or are being cared for in the hospitals of England or France it is with grateful hearts that we greet you again safe and sound in your native town. Yet we are not unmindful of your less fortunate companions. Our hearts go out in sympathy for the bereaved and suffering and you will not remain with us long before you

France is preparing to call up the last available young man, as Germany is now doing. The Army Committee of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday authorized the calling to the colors December 15 of the conscripts of 1915. This will add to the nation's arm strength for garrison purposes fit and for field service as soon as sufficient training can be given, so 400,000 young lads now ranging from eighteen almost to nineteen years of age. The class of 1916, consisting of youths who will reach their twentieth year during the twelve months beginning in January, has already been called up, trained and sent forward into the field armies. France and Germany are both finding it necessary to use lads under twenty by a hundred thousand in the firing line.

Rome reports another day of successful operations on the Ison front, where both north and south Goritz the Italians won ground of utmost importance. On the Carpi plateau large and deep entrenchments on the Son Martino ridges were captured, 514 prisoners were taken and Austrian columns brought up a counter-attack were dispersed. Austrian Commanders are reported have made an urgent appeal for reinforcements. Herrington K.C., read an address of welcome, expressing the honor which the citizens felt in the fact that so many of our young men had listened to the call of duty and selflessly offered their services to the country among the first of whom was Capt. Hall. Following is the address:

APTAIN HALL:—

On behalf of the Corporation and citizens of Napanee I have been asked to welcome you back from the front. You were among the first to respond to the call of duty and tender your services to your King and Country. These dark and distressful hours in the history of our Empire, Canada's brave mothers and wives have displayed a spirit of Spartan patriotism. I am sure that the hardships of the firing line have been borne by you with a lighter heart by reason of the support and encouragement you were receiving from your good wife and other.

Yet we are not unmindful of your less fortunate companions. Our hearts go out in sympathy for the bereaved and suffering and you will remain with us long before you loved Canada but also for the maintenance of freedom, justice and civilization throughout the world. You have faithfully performed your part in helping to stamp out the iniquitous doctrine that "might is right". In writing to the boys you left behind in France I trust you will tell them that the same glorious home-coming awaits them.

To those before us now in training for over-seas service I hope this event will prove an inspiration. I also hope that this object lesson will bring home to all young men of military age a due sense of the esteem in which our country regards those who are prepared to stand by that flag under whose protecting folds we have so long enjoyed the blessings of peace. Those who turn a deaf ear to their country's call for help may draw their own inferences as to the standard by which they will be measured by the present and future generations.

I know you are anxious to retire to rejoin your own family circle and it would be cruel to further detain you from that meeting with your loved ones, who for months have fervently prayed for the happy reunion that now awaits you.

On behalf of all Napanee I again welcome you home.

Yours most Sincerely,
W. S. HERRINGTON.

Dated at Napanee the 22nd of November, 1915.

In reply Capt. Hall said that he was proud to know that after a long absence from Napanee the citizens had tendered him such a rousing reception, and in a short speech explained where the battery, of which he was second in command, had been stationed during the nine months it has been in France, after a short visit he expects to leave again for France. On concluding his remarks three rousing cheers were given him after which the band played "O Canada" and "God Save the King."

TO CORPORAL JOHN BENTLEY.

The Corporation and citizens of the Town of Napanee, take this first opportunity of welcoming you back to our Town after your stirring experiences with the first contingent in France.

When the bugle called you to duty, although an old veteran of the British Army, who might feel that he had already served his King and Country, you were among the first who volunteered for overseas service and your example and enthusiasm proved so contagious that you were instrumental in influencing a number of our sterling young men, to also volunteer and go with you.

You left Napanee an ordinary citizen and perhaps little known to most of us, but your worth was soon recognized by the Military Authorities, and you gained the rank of Corporal on your personal merits, reminding us of the lines of Burns the Poet, when he says:

"The honest man, though e'er so poor,

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that!"

Greece is Reported to Have Offered the Entente Powers a Piece of Territory for the Concentration of Troops—Greek Army Enlarged—Allies Have Taken a Stand Towards Wavering

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch from the Central News from Athens that Premier Briand of France telegraphed to Minister Cochon stating that, in view of the unfavourable attitude of Greece, he vises a modification of the policy pro-Hellenism.

The despatch adds that Greece offered the Entente a portion of territory for the concentration of troops, pledging that neither the Serb nor the Allies will be disarmed they are confined to this territory is believed the offer will be rejected.

Additional men have been called the colors. The Greek army, it stated, now numbers 500,000 men.

The Athens correspondent of the Havas News Agency in a despatch confirms the report that the Entente powers have declared a commercial blockade of Greece. The announcement to this effect, made in the form of a note issued by the British Legation at Athens, is given as follows:

"Because of the attitude taken by the Hellenic Government in regard to certain questions touching closely security and liberty of action which the allied troops have the right under the conditions of their disembarkation on Greek territory, the allied powers have deemed it necessary to take certain measures which have the effect of suspending economic and commercial facilities which Greece has received from them heretofore.

"It is not the intention of the allied powers to constrain Greece to abandon her neutrality, to maintain in their eyes, is the best guarantee of her interests. The allied Governments have been somewhat disturbed by certain allusions to eventual measures which, if taken by the Hellenic Government, would appear to them be contradictory to assurances they have received.

"As soon as their doubts on this subject—due, no doubt, to a misunderstanding—have been dispelled the powers will be happy to remove the obstacles now opposed to the rival of merchandise in Greece and accord any facilities which result from normal relations."

An Athens despatch to The Times says it is confirmed that the Entente Powers have imposed restrictions on Greek trade. The allied fleets, it added, have already begun searching all steamers flying the Greek flag the Aegean and Mediterranean.

An Athens despatch to Reuters Telegram Company says that Field Marshal Kitchener, after an audience with King Constantine lasting more than an hour, conferred with Premier Skouloudis and left Athens at 10 o'clock Saturday evening.

All the London morning papers make a feature of an interview given by Eleutherios Venizelos, the former Greek Premier, in Athens, Nov. 8, which he said:

"Two things seem quite clear to me—first, that Germany is bound to lose in the long run; second, that new battleground in the Balkans offers favorable conditions for the Allies."

ROUMANIA WITH ALLIES.

Her Entry Only a Matter of Weeks Says Count Tanasosso.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Roumania is only waiting the few weeks necessary for Russia to complete military preparations along her frontier before she throws in her lot with the Allies, according to a declaration Count Al Tanasosso, who sailed yesterday on a secret mission for Government in France.

"It is only a matter of a few weeks before Roumania will be in the war," he said shortly before he sailed the French liner Espagno. "At the time has there been any indecision on the part of my country as to whether she intended to do. From the outset the minds of the Roumanian people have been set on entering on the side of the Allies. All this talk we have been hearing about Roumania maintaining a friendly attitude toward Teuton has been cooked up in Germany."

"It is absurd to think that Roumania ever entertained the idea of being friendly with the Central powers. For many months a Roumanian committee has been in this country buying supplies and shipping them by way of France. Would this have been possible if there had not been an understanding between France and Roumania?"

eece is Reported to Have Offered the Entente Powers a Piece of Territory for the Concentration of Troops—Greek Army Enlarged—Allies Have Taken a Firm Stand Towards Wavering State.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch to Central News from Athens says Premier Briand of France has graphed to Minister Cochon explaining that, in view of the unsatisfactory attitude of Greece, he has a modification of the policy of Hellenism.

The despatch adds that Greece has red the Entente a portion of territory for the concentration of troops, giving that neither the Serbians nor the Allies will be disarmed if they are confined to this territory. EXPLOSIONS AT NOBEL.

Allies Suspected of Destruction of Buildings of Explosive Plant.

PARRY SOUND, Nov. 23.—Explosions, believed to be the work of alien enemies, destroyed the drying houses, five small one-storey wooden buildings of the Canadian Explosives Co., Ltd., at Nobel, seven miles north of this town, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, about 7.30 o'clock this evening. Color is lent to the suspicion by the fact that the explosions occurred practically simultaneously in all the buildings. So far as is at present learned, no one was injured, except possibly the nightwatchman, the employees having quit work some little time before the occurrence.

The premises cover some three square miles, situated on the shore of Georgian Bay, the buildings being isolated. The factory has been in operation for about two years, and is engaged in the production of gun-cotton, cordite, and other high explosives, having at present a large order from the British War Office. Mr. T. D. Yansey is the manager.

Major Storey, in charge of the overseas contingent in training here, sent one hundred and fifty soldiers of the Northern Pioneers to the Nobel plant. They will throw a cordon around the entire works, to guard them from entry by any person unauthorized.

When the explosions occurred the town was heavily shaken as by an earthquake. The glass in the windows and doors of the C. P. R. station at Nobel was broken, and all the buildings of the plant more or less shaken, some being very badly damaged.

As the explosions occurred in the gun-cotton, it is believed that they were not accidental, but caused by some hand, as the gun-cotton would not go up without the assistance of an explosive or incendiary attempt. The magazines are situated about a mile and a half from the works.

ALREADY SUBSCRIBED?

Canadian War Loan Taken Up With Surprising Rapidity.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—All reports received yesterday by the Department of Finance as to the Canadian war loan indicate that it has met with a remarkable reception, and has been taken up in a manner surpassing even the most sanguine expectations. Although no complete reports as to the total amount subscribed during the first day are yet available, there is little doubt but that the full amount of $50,000,000 has already been subscribed.

The issue is to total $50,000,000 of 5 per cent. bonds maturing Dec. 1, 1925 and repayable at par. The issue price is to be 97½, and a full half year's interest will be paid on June 1, 1916.

Applications accompanied by a 10 per cent. deposit of the amount subscribed must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank and such may be had at any bank or the office of the receiver general. Ten per cent. must be paid on application, 7½ per cent. on Jan. 3, 20 per cent. on Feb. 1, 20 per cent. March 1, 20 per cent. April 1, and 20 per cent. on May 1, 1916. All payments are to be made to the banks to the credit of the Minister of Finance.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000, or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Subscription lists will close on or before Nov. 30.

MOVING ON PRISTINA

Big Battle Before Serbian Capital Is Imminent.

Decisive Victory of Serbians Over the Bulgars at Leskovatz Is Confirmed by Serbian Minister at Athens—Bulgarian Army Fled in Disorder to the Morava River—British Are Now in Monastir.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Bulgarians are approaching Pristina from two sides, and a decisive battle on the historic Kossovo plain is imminent. Pristina is the principal city of this region, and was the Serbian war capital for a short time after the Government fled from Nish and Mitrovitza. Despatches last night say that the Government is at Pristina. Four Ministers of the Entente powers are also at Pristina.

The report that the Serbians have won an important victory over the Bulgarians near Leskovatz, on the Nish-Salonica railroad, 25 miles south of Nish, is corroborated in a despatch received yesterday in Paris from the Serbian Minister at Athens. The message says that after a battle of several days, in which the Bulgarians sustained enormous losses, the remnant of their army fled in disorder to the eastern bank of the Morava River.

A Daily News despatch from Athens, filed Saturday, says:

"Bulgarian troops have ceased their attack from Philip towards Monastir because they fear Serbian troops at Katchanik will advance and encircle them."

Despatches from Bucharest to the Italian press say that British forces have arrived at the Serbian city of Monastir, and are being reinforced. Road conditions delayed the advance of the Bulgarians against Monastir. Whether the Serb-British force can hold out long is doubtful, but an optimistic note is sounded in a Reuters Agency despatch from Athens dated yesterday. According to the correspondent, persons arriving from the front describe the situation as less sombre than reported. He adds:

"The Serbians are retreating in perfect order, and have lost no prisoners. The guns captured by the Bulgarians are old pieces of little value, and a thousand pieces of artillery remain in the possession of the Serbs, whose morale is still good. The ultimate issue depends upon the timely arrival of the allies' forces."

ANOTHER DRIVE COMING.

Artillery Activity on Western Front Points to Big Push.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Reports of the French fighting along the western front, disclosing the fact that lively artillery actions are taking place at many points, is believed to be significant. The French, it is thought, are planning an important movement for which the artillery actions are a preparation. The official communique yesterday dealt chiefly with the artillery activity, and the War Office announced later that there was nothing to add to this previous communication.

It was a similar and heavy artillery preparation along the western front which the French employed before they made their great drive late in September and broke through the German lines in the Champagne district, driving the enemy back to their second lines and taking thousands of prisoners. This was an offensive movement that extended all the way from the North Sea to Alsace. The village of Loos, mentioned in yesterday's official statement as being in the vicinity of the extremely lively artillery actions which are now taking place, was captured by the French at that time. During that drive the British reached the outskirts of Hulluch, which is also named in the latest official French statement as one of the points at which artillery fire is now heavy.

TURKISH SPY SYSTEM.

It Not Only Keeps Tab Upon Strangers, but Spies Upon Itself.

Turkey boasts of more spies to the square mile than any other country, as any one who has been to Turkey will agree.

The peculiar thing about these spies is that they themselves cannot be trusted, so that a regular chain of spies is the result. There are spies to spy upon the spies.

The government officials have their own spies to watch other people, but even the great authorities themselves are already being spied upon.

What is more, the method of spying is quite open, for the spies will stand by wherever two or three foreigners are gathered together and listen to the conversation. Visitors to Turkey naturally get worried over such attentions, especially when it might be their bad luck to be followed about for weeks or months.

It is the "uninitiated" visitor who usually receives the most attention, since he or she will carry on conversation in a quiet undertone. The person who knows Turkey converses in a loud tone for all and sundry—the spies especially—to hear that he is only an

PRISONERS BADLY TREATED.

Germans at Wittenberg Look on Captured Soldiers as Criminals.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The British press bureau has published the reports of James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, and members of the Embassy Staff in Berlin, relative to the condition of British prisoners of war in the camp at Wittenberg, Prussia.

Lithgow Osborne reported that his whole impression of the camp authorities was utterly unlike that which he had received in every other camp he visited. Instead of regarding their charges as honorable prisoners of war, he stated, they apparently regarded them as criminals whom a regime of fear alone sufficed to keep in obedience.

The following extracts are taken from Ambassador Gerard's report:

"I regret to state that after a careful examination of the camp and long conversations with the prisoners my impression is even more unfavorable than I had been led to expect.

"There are over four thousand prisoners in the camp, of whom 278 are British. Among these I found only sixteen overcoats. The men, on the whole, are insufficiently clothed.

Fall of Gorizia and Isonzo Line is Now Believed to Be Certain.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The fall of Gorizia (Goriz), the Austrian city which is the key to the Isonzo River line and stands at the gate to the Italian Peninsula, is now believed to be certain. Private advices from Rome yesterday said that the Austrians were making preparations to give up the city and the present line of defence and retire to a new line which was constructed some time ago.

General Borojevic, commanding the Austrian forces, called for reinforcements and was told that the general staff could not relieve him. In the meantime Gorizia is ruined by Italian shell fire and the chief buildings are wrecked. Italian troops of the Perugia brigade have gained a foothold on the slopes of Monte San Michele, which height commands the city. Seven times the Austrians attacked the Italians on this sector and were driven back. The fighting is desperate.

The opening of the Isonzo line will place Trieste, the chief commercial city, and Pola, the Austrian naval base, at the mercy of the Italians.

The German army commanded by
 Gen. von Kooress, which was reported Saturday as having advanced from Raska, on the Ivan, where the river crosses the southern boundary of Old Serbia, to Banja, north-east of Novi-Bazar, has taken the latter town, according to the German official statement issued yesterday. Novi-Bazar is a little over six miles south-west of Raska, on the Raska River, a tributary of the Ivar.

Meanwhile the Serbian army which was operating in the north-western corner of the old sanjak of Novi-Bazar has effected a junction with the Montenegrins, and apparently has withdrawn with the Montenegrins across the Lim to Montenegrin soil.
 An official Montenegrin statement announces that the Montenegrin and Serbian forces are holding against heavy attacks on the Lim, and that the Montenegrins in the sanjak have been compelled to retire to their principal positions of defence, presumably in their own mountains on the left bank of the river.

The withdrawal of a body of Serbians to Montenegrin soil does not mean that the whole Serbian army in Central Serbia has been driven off its own territory, for Mitrovic, connected by railway with Uskub, where the road joins the Nish-Salonica railway, is still in Serbian hands, as also is Pristina, south-east of Mitrovic, and east of the railway.

A Star Legend.

Ursa Major, the Great Bear, as the constellation has been known, in widely separated parts of the world, has many interesting stories connected with it. One is the Indian legend of the bear and the hunters. As pictured by the red men, the bowl of the dipper is the bear, and the stars in the handle are some of the hunters in pursuit.
 In the spring the bear comes out of the den in the hills, and the chase begins.
 All summer it continues until at last in the autumn the bear is wounded and falls so close to the earth that its body drags along the horizon, tinging the leaves with its blood soon after sunset. Throughout the early hours of the winter evening the dead bear is seen beneath the pole by the imaginative red men of the north.—Littler J.

CAPTURING A MODEL.

A Complexion That Delacroix Could Not Let Escape.

Delacroix, the painter, was walking out one day in Paris with a friend of his when he felt into a brown study.

"What is up with you now?" said the friend.

"I can't get a certain shade of yellow," replied the artist.

"What sort of yellow?"

"Just then a cab drove past.

"The very thing!" the painter gasped
 out. "Stop, stop!"

"I am engaged," the cabby replied without stopping.

Delacroix started in pursuit and at a steep place in the Rue des Martyrs overtook the cab. Opening the door, he said in tones of entreaty to the passenger inside:

"Do please tell your driver to stop.
 I want your complexion for a painting on which I am at work. There is a color merchant close at hand. I shall not detain you above five minutes, and in acknowledgment of the service you render me I will present you with a sketch of my picture."

The bargain was struck. Delacroix got his yellow, and a few months later the "fare" received a sketch of his "Assassination of the Archbishop of Liege."

The People of China.

There are about sixty different peoples, or tribes, which go to make up the population of China. Practically nine-tenths of the population is to be found in China proper, the great majority being of the Chinese race. With the exception of a few Iranians and a few people of the hill tribes, all of the Chinese population belongs, physically, to various branches of the great Mongol-Tartar family. The government of the republic recognized five principal races when designing the new flag, which replaces the yellow dragon of the old national ensign with five stripes —crimson, yellow, white, blue and black—symbolical of the five races comprised in the Chinese people, Mongol, Chinese, Manchu, Mohammedan and Tibetan.

History.

History is a voice forever sounding across the centuries the laws of right and wrong. Opinions alter, manners change, creeds rise and fall, but the moral law is written on the tablets of eternity. For every false word or unrighteous deed, for cruelty and oppression, for lust or vanity, the price has to be paid at last—not always by the chief offenders, but paid by some one.
 Justice and truth alone endure and live. Injustice and falsehood may be long lived, but doomsday comes at last to them in French revolutions and other terrible ways.—James Anthony

SYNOPSIS.

Sanford Quest, master criminologist of the world, finds that in bringing to justice Macdougall, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal. In a hidden hut in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an ape skeleton and a living creature, half monkey, half man, destroyed by fire. In his rooms have appeared black boxes containing notes, signed by a pair of armless hands. Laura and Lenora, his assistants, suspect Craig, the professor's servant, of a double murder. The black boxes continue to appear in uncanny fashion. Craig is trapped, but escapes to England, where Quest, Lenora and the professor follow him. Lord Ashleigh is murdered by the Hands. Craig is captured, escapes to Port Said. Quest and his party follow, and beyond into the desert. They are captured by Mongars, escape with Craig as their captive and turn him over to Inspector French in San Francisco. He escapes from French in a train wreck and is chased by the party across the Mexican line.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT

TONGUES OF FLAME.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

From the shadows of the trees on the farther side of the river, Craig with strained eyes watched Quest's struggle. He saw him reach Lenora, watched him struggle to the bank with her, waited until he had lifted her on to his horse. Then he turned slowly around and faced the one country in the world where freedom was still possible for him. He looked into the wall of darkness, penetrated only at one spot by a little blaze of light. Slowly, with his arm through the bridle of his horse, he limped towards it. As he drew nearer and discovered its source, he hesitated. The light came through the uncurtained windows of a saloon, three long, yellow shafts illuminating the stunted shrubs and sandy places. Craig kept in the shadow between them and drew a little nearer. From inside he could hear the thumping of a worn piano, the twanging of a guitar, the rattle of glasses, the uproarious shouting of men, the shrill laughter of women. The tired men and the lame horse stole reluctantly a little nearer. Craig listened once more wearily. It was home he longed for so much—and rest. The very thought of the place sickened him. Even when he reached the door, he hesitated and instead of entering stood back amongst the shadows. If only he could find any other sort of shelter!

Inside, the scene was ordinary enough. There was a long bar, against which were lounging half a dozen typical Mexican cowpunchers. There was a small space cleared for dancing, at the farther end of which two performers were making weird but vehement music. Three girls were dancing with cowboys, not ungracefully considering the state of the floor and who had been dancing suddenly intervened. The girl screamed.

"It was Jose's fault!" she cried. "Jose was mad. He would have killed me!"

Craig faced them all with sudden courage.

"As I came in," he explained, "that man had his knife raised to stab the girl. You don't allow that sort of thing, do you, here?"

The two cowboys linked their arms through Jose's and led him off toward the door.

"The stranger's right, Jose," one of them insisted. "You can't carve a girl up in company."

The girl clutched at Craig's arm. "Sit down here, please," she begged. "Wait."

She disappeared for a moment and came back with a glass full of wine, which she set down on the table.

"Drink this," she invited. "And thank you for saving me."

Craig emptied the glass eagerly. "I just happened to be the first to see him," he said. "They aren't quite wild enough to allow that here, are they?"

"Quien sabe? The girls do not like me! The men do not care," she declared. "Jose took me by surprise, though, or I would have killed him. But who are you, and where did you come from?"

"I have just crossed the border," he replied.

She nodded understandingly.

"Were they after you?"

"Yes! with a warrant for my arrest!"

She patted his hand.

"You are safe now," she whispered.

"We care that much for a United States warrant," and she snapped her slim fingers. "You shall stay with us for a time. We will take care of you."

He sighed wearily.

Back in the camp, a spirit of devilry had entered into Long Jim and his mates. A tactless remark on the part of one of the deputies had set alight the smoldering fire of resentment which the cowboys had all the time felt against them. At a word from Long Jim they were taken by surprise and tied to the wagon.

The deputies spluttered with rage and fear. Shot rained about them and the canvas of the wagon was riddled.

Suddenly they all paused to listen. The sound of a horse's slow footfall was heard close at hand. Presently Quest appeared out of the shadows, carrying Lenora in his arms. Laura rushed forward.

"Lenora!" she cried. "Is she hurt?" Quest laid her tenderly upon the ground.

"We had a spill at the bridge," he explained, quickly. "I don't know whether Craig loosened the supports.

old, are you? Why do you not stand up and be a man? If you have done wrong, then very likely people have done wrong things to you. Why should you brood over these memories? Why—What are you looking at? Who are these people?"

The professor, with Quest and Long Jim, suddenly appeared round the corner of the building. They walked towards Craig. He shrank back in his place.

"If these are your enemies," the girl cried, fiercely, "remember that they cannot touch you here. I'll have the boys out in a minute, if they dare to try it."

Craig struggled to his feet. He made no answer. His eyes were fixed upon the professor's. The girl passed her arm through his and dragged him into the saloon. They passed Jose in the doorway. He scoffed at them.

"Say, the boss will fire you, Marta, if you waste all your time with that Yankee," he muttered.

Marta drew the red rose from the bosom of her dress and placed it in Craig's buttonhole. Then she led him without a word to a seat.

"If these men try any tricks in here," she said, "there'll be trouble."

Almost at that moment they all three entered. Long Jim nodded to Craig in friendly fashion.

"It's all right, cookie," he told them. "Don't you look so scared. This is just a bit of parleyvous business, that's all."

The professor held out a piece of paper. He handed it over to Craig.

"Craig," he announced, "this is a dispatch, which I found in Allguez with my letters. It is addressed to you, but under the circumstances you will scarcely wonder that I opened it. You had better read it."

Craig accepted the cable form and read it through slowly to himself:

To John Craig, Care Prof. Lord Ashleigh, Yonkers, New York:

Your sister died today. Her daughter Mary sails on Tuesday to join you in New York. Please meet her.

COMPTON, Solicitor, London.

Craig sat for a moment as though stunned. The girl leaned over towards him.

"Are they trying to take you on a warrant?" she whispered. "Remember,

"Four Ribs Broken," Pronounced for

ing "You know what they said, the two, as they passed out?" she whispered, hoarsely. "I heard them. They are going to board the 8 train tomorrow morning. The driver man turned and said to the other, 'If he is not on that, we'll wait till find him. Once we get him in New York, he's our man.'"

A little exclamation of anger broke from Craig's lips. The girl caught his arm.

"Don't go," she begged. "Don't! There are plenty of places near here where you can hide, where we can go together and live quite simply. Work for you. Take me away from this, somewhere over the hills. Do go to New York. They are cruel, the men. They are hunting you—I can see it in their faces."

Craig shook his head sadly.

"Little girl," he said, "I should like to go with you along that valley over the hills and forget that I have ever lived in any other world. I can't do it. There's a child there now, on the ocean, nearer to New York every day, my sister's own child and no one to meet her. And—there are the other things. I have sinned and I must pay. . . . My God!"

The room suddenly rang with Marta's shriek. Through the open window by which they were sitting, an arm wrapped in a serape had suddenly hovered over them. Craig, in start of back, had just escaped the downward blow of the knife, which had buried itself in Marta's arm. She fell back screaming.

"It's Jose!" she cried. "The brute! The beast!"

Craig swung to his feet, furious. Long Jim, cursing fiercely, drew a gun. At that moment the door of the saloon was thrown open. Jose careening in, his serape over his shoulder, a drunken grin on his face, staggered towards them.

"Here you beast!" the girl reached the door, he hesitated and instead of entering stood back amongst the shadows. If only he could find any other sort of shelter!

Inside, the scene was ordinary enough. There was a long bar, against which were lounging half a dozen typical Mexican cowpunchers. There was a small space cleared for dancing, at the farther end of which two performers were making weird but vehement music. Three girls were dancing with cowboys, not ungracefully considering the state of the floor and the frequent discords in the music. One of them—the prettiest—stopped abruptly and pushed her partner away from her.

"You have drunk too much, Jose!" she exclaimed. "You cannot dance. You tread on my feet and you lean against me. I do not like it. I will dance with you another night when you are sober. Go away, please."

Her cavalier swayed for a moment on his feet. Then he looked down upon her with an evil glitter in his eyes. She was tall and thin, with a black mustache and yellow, unpleasant looking teeth.

"So you will not dance any longer with Jose?" he muttered. "Very well, you shall drink with him, then. We will sit together at one of those little tables. Listen, you shall drink wine."

"I do not want to drink wine with you. All that I wish is to be left alone," the girl insisted, curtly. "Go and play cards, if you want to. There is Pietro over there, and Diego. Perhaps you may win some money. They say that drunkards have all the luck."

Jose leered at her.

"Presently I will play cards," he said. "Presently I will win all their money and I will buy jewelry for you, Marta—stones that look like diamonds and will sparkle in your neck and in your hair."

She turned disdainfully away. "I do not want your jewelry, Jose," she declared.

He caught her suddenly by the wrist.

"Perhaps this is what you want," he cried, as he stooped down to kiss her.

She swung her right hand round and struck him on the face. He staggered back for a moment. There was a red flush which showed through the tan of his cheek. Then he drew a little nearer to her, and before she could escape had passed his long arm around her body. He drew her to the chair placed by the side of the wall. His left hand played with the knife at his belt.

"Marta, little sweetheart," he said mockingly, "you must pay for that blow. Don't be afraid," he went on, as he drew the knife across his leather breeches. "A little scratch across your cheek, so! It is but the brand of your master, a love token from Jose. Steady, now, little Maverick!"

The girl struggled violently, but Jose was strong; such brawls were common and those of the company who noticed at all, merely laughed at the girl's futile struggles. Jose's arm was already raised with the knife in his hand, when a sudden blow brought a yell of pain to his lips. The knife fell clattering to the floor. He sprang up, his eyes red with fury. A man had entered the door from behind and was standing within a few feet of him, a man with long, pale face, dark eyes, travel-stained, and with the air of a fugitive. A flood of incoherent abuse streamed from Jose's lips. He stooped for the knife. Marta threw herself upon him. The two cowboys

the deputies spluttered with rage and fear. Shot rained about them and the canvas of the wagon was riddled.

Suddenly they all paused to listen. The sound of a horse's slow footfall was heard close at hand. Presently Quest appeared out of the shadows, carrying Lenora in his arms. Laura rushed forward.

"Lenora!" she cried. "Is she hurt?" Quest laid her tenderly upon the ground.

"We had a spill at the bridge," he explained, quickly. "I don't know whether Craig loosened the supports. He got over all right, but it went down under Lenora, who was following, and I had to get her out of the river. Where's the professor?"

The professor came ambling from the tent where he had been lying. He stooped at once over Lenora's still unconscious form.

"Dear me!" he exclaimed. "Dear me! Come, come!"

He passed his hand over her side and made a brief examination.

"Four ribs broken," he pronounced. "It will be a week, at any rate, before we are able to move her. Nothing more serious, so far as I can see, Mr. Quest, but she'll need rest and all the comfort we can give her."

"Say, that's too bad!" Long Jim declared. "If you've got to stay around for a time, though, you can have the tents. We boys can double up anywhere, or bunk on the ground. That's right, ain't it?" he added, turning around to the cowboys.

There was a little grunt of acquiescence. They carried Lenora to the largest of the tents and made her as comfortable as possible.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The girl drew a low stool over to Craig's side. He was sitting in a rough chair tilted back against the adobe wall of the saloon.

"As tired as ever?" she asked, laying her hand upon his for a moment.

He turned his head and looked at her.

"Always tired," he answered, listlessly.

She made a little grimace.

"But you are so strange," she protested. "Over the hills there are the steam cars. They would take you to some of our beautiful cities, where all is light and gayety. You are safe here, whatever your troubles may have been. You say that you have money, and if you are lonely," she added, dropping her voice, "you need not go alone."

He patted her hand affectionately, but there was something a little forced about the action.

"Child," he said, "it is so hard to make you understand. I might lose myself for a few minutes, it is true, over yonder. Perhaps, even," he added, "you might help me to forget. And then there would be the awakening. That is always the same. Sometimes at night I sleep, and when I sleep I rest, and when my eyes are opened in the morning the weight comes back and sits upon my heart, and the strength seems to pass from my limbs and the will from my brain."

Her eyes were soft and her voice shook a little as she leaned towards him. Something in his helplessness had kindled the protective spirit in her.

"Has life been so terrible for you?" she whispered. "Have you left behind—but no! you never could have been really wicked. You are not very

"I Have Sinned and I Must Pay!" you don't need to go unless you want to."

Craig shook his head.

"This is something quite different," he explained. "Leave me for a moment, Marta. I must talk to these people."

She slipped regretfully away from his side and out into the darkness. He sat with his eyes fixed upon the telegram. Then he turned towards Quest.

"Fate seems to be too strong for me," he admitted. "Leave me alone and I promise you that I'll go at once to New York, settle Mary's future and then make a full disclosure."

Jim touched him on the shoulder.

"Remember," he told him, "you ain't no call to leave here unless you want to. Those deputies don't go this side of the border. You're safe as long as you like to stay."

Craig nodded gratefully.

"All the same," he said, "I fear that I must go."

The professor coughed.

"I am sure, Craig," he declared, "that you have decided wisely."

Craig looked gloomily away.

"There is nothing else for me to do," he said. "The child must be met and looked after. Besides, I am sick of it all. You may as well know the truth."

"Why not now?" Quest suggested, softly.

"In New York," Craig replied, "and not before."

Quest and the professor exchanged meaning glances.

"Very well," the former decided, turning away; "in a week from today, Craig, I shall expect you to report at the professor's house."

They left the room together. Long Jim lingered by Craig's side.

"Those guys have been scaring you some, I guess," he remarked. "Forget 'em, cookie. They can't touch you here. Of course, if you go to New York it's your own show."

"I know that," Craig replied, gloomily.

One of the girls passed her arm through Long Jim's.

"Just one dance," she whispered.

He hesitated, looking out of the window. Then he shrugged his shoulders.

"I'm tired of those guys," he remarked to Craig, with a grin. "Guess I'll stay here for a bit."

Craig was left alone for a few minutes. Suddenly Marta glided in and sat by his side. Her eyes were flashing with anger.

hovered over them. Craig, in star back, had just escaped the down blow of the knife, which had buried itself in Marta's arm. She fell back screaming.

"It's Jose!" she cried. "The brute! The beast!"

Craig swung to his feet, furling Long Jim, cursing fiercely, drew gun. At that moment the door of saloon was thrown open. Jose, reeling in, his serape over his shoulder, a drunken grin on his face, staggered towards them.

"Jose, you beast!" the girl called out, and fell back, fainting.

There was the sound of a revolver shot and Jose reeled backwards, fell with a cry across the sanded floor. Jim thrust his smoking gun into belt and caught Craig by the arm.

"Say, we'd better get out of this cookie!" he muttered.

They hustled out. Apparently Jose was unpopular, for everyone seemed only anxious to have them clear away.

"I'll get you into the camp quiet," Long Jim muttered. "You'll be safe there for the night. Then you make that 8:30 in the morning."

Lenora, with her bed dragged through the opening of the tent, greeted the little party, on their return, eager. Quest at once came and sat by side.

"Where's Laura," he asked, "and the inspector?"

She smiled and pointed to the firing ground behind them. In the faint moonlight two forms were just visible.

Quest smiled.

"French has got it bad," he declared, "almost as badly as I have Lenora."

She laughed at him. Her face was a little drawn with pain, but her eyes were very soft.

"I wonder if you have it very badly," she murmured.

He held her hand for a moment. "I think you know," he said.

"As they talked they heard coyotes barking in the distance. Presently Laura and the inspector turned.

"Nice sort of a nurse I am," the former grumbled. "It's all the fault of this man. He would keep me there talking rubbish."

They sat round the opening of Lenora's tent till the moon was high in the heavens. Quest, who had been the outside of the circle for some little time, suddenly rose to his feet, crossed over to the cook wagon. Long Jim, who was sitting on the stool, glanced up a little surlily.

"Who's inside there?" Quest asked.

Long Jim removed his pipe from teeth.

"That don't sound none too civil question for a guest," he remarked, "but if you want to know, our Chinese cookie is there."

Quest nodded.

"Sorry if I seemed abrupt," he apologized. "You've been very good to us and I'm sure we are uncommonly obliged to you, Jim. The only reason I asked the question was that I saw a face in the door there and gave me a start. For a moment I thought it was Craig back again."

"He's gone to New York, or go tomorrow morning," Jim replied. "don't think he's so powerful fond your company that he'd come round here looking for it."

Quest strolled off again and glanced at his watch as he rejoined the little group.

Four Ribs Broken," Pronounced the Professor. "She Cannot Be Moved for a Week."

"You know what they said, those wo, as they passed out?" she whispered, hoarsely. "I heard them. They are going to board the 8:30 train tomorrow morning. The dark man turned and said to the other: 'If he is not on that, we'll wait till we find him. Once we get him in New York, he's our man.'"

A little exclamation of anger broke from Craig's lips. The girl caught at his arm.

"Don't go," she begged. "Don't go. There are plenty of places near here where you can hide, where we could go together and live quite simply. I'd work for you. Take me away from this, somewhere over the hills. Don't go to New York. They are cruel, those men. They are hunting you—I can see it in their faces."

Craig shook his head sadly.

"Little girl," he said, "I should like to go with you along that valley and over the hills and forget that I had ever lived in any other world. But I can't do it. There's a child there now, on the ocean, nearer to New York every day, my sister's own child and no one to meet her. And—there are the other things. I have sinned and I must pay. . . . My God!"

The room suddenly rang with Marta's shriek. Through the open window by which they were sitting, an arm wrapped in a serape had suddenly covered over them. Craig, in starting back, had just escaped the downward blow of the knife, which had buried itself in Marta's arm. She fell back, rearing.

"It's Jose!" she cried. "The brute! he beast!"

Craig swung to his feet, furious. Along Jim, cursing fiercely, drew his knife. At that moment the door of the moon was thrown open. Jose came stumbling in, his serape over his shoulder, a drunken grin on his face. He staggered towards them.

"Jose, you beast!" the girl called

"Well," he said, "I think we'll turn in. Seven o'clock tomorrow morning, inspector. Jim's sending one of the boys with us and we shall catch the Eastern Limited at the junction."

"This open-air life makes me sleepy," he confessed.

"To bed, all of us," Quest concluded, turning away.

CHAPTER XXX.

Quest awoke the next morning, stretched out his hand and glanced at the watch by the side of the bed. It was barely six o'clock. He turned over and dozed again, looked again at half-past six, and finally, at a few minutes to seven, rose and made a hasty toilet. Then, in the act of placing his watch in his waistcoat pocket, he gave a sudden start. By its side, half covered by the handkerchief which he had thrown upon the little table, stood a small black box! For a moment he was motionless. Then he stretched out his hand, removed the lid and drew out the usual neatly folded piece of paper:

Even time fights you. It loses that you may lose.—The Hands.

Quest for a moment was puzzled. Then he hurried into the next tent, where the professor was sleeping peacefully.

"Say, professor, what's the time by your watch?" Quest asked, shaking him gently.

The professor sat up and drew his chronometer from under his pillow.

"Seven o'clock," he replied; "five minutes past, maybe."

Quest nodded.

"That seems all right," he declared. "I'll explain later, professor."

He hurried out into French's tent and found the inspector just drawing on his shoes.

"French, what's the time?" he demanded.

"Three minutes past seven, or

"No can ride, missee," he said. Lenora looked around helplessly. The camp was empty. She staggered across towards her own horse.

"Come and help me," she ordered. The Chinaman came unwillingly. They found her saddle, but he only gazed at it in a stolid sort of fashion. "No can fix," he said. "Missee no can ride. Better go back bed."

Lenora pushed him on one side. With a great effort she managed to reach her place in the saddle. Then she turned and, with her face to the depot, galloped away. The pain was excruciating. She could only keep herself in the saddle with an effort. For all the time that one sentence was ringing in her head—"Tongues of flame!" She kept looking around anxiously. Suddenly the road dropped from a little decline. She was conscious of a wave of heat. In the distance she could see the smoke rolling across the open. She touched her horse with the quirt. The spot which he must pass to keep on the track to the depot was scarcely a hundred yards ahead, but already the fire seemed to be running like quicksilver across the ground, licking up the dry grasses with indeed a flaming tongue. She glanced once behind, warned by the heat. The fire was closing in upon her. A puff of smoke suddenly enveloped her. She coughed. Her head began to swim and a fit of dizziness assailed her. She rocked in her saddle and the pony came to a sudden standstill, faced by the mass of rolling smoke and flame.

"Sanford!" Lenora cried. "Save me!"

The pony reared. She slipped from the saddle and fell across the track.

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

On the Moon.

The question "Could a man live on the moon?" has been put to an eminent astronomer, who replied: "I am afraid not. A man transplanted to the moon would find himself the lone inhabitant of a perfectly lifeless orb to which eternal silence reigns. He would have to manage without air, water or fire. He would not need to put windows in his house, for there is no wind, no rain, no dust, upon the moon. It has been truly and practically observed that the moon is apparently abandoned to death, nourishing no inhabitants, producing nothing resembling trees, flowers or beautiful things of any kind—useless, in short, except as a mass of extinct volcanic rubbish, which drags the sea into tides and reflects the sunbeams in moonlight."

"Three minutes past seven, or thereabouts," French replied, yawning. "I'm coming right along. We've got lots of time. Three-quarters of an hour ought to do it, the boys say."

They walked outside to the camp, where the cowboys were finishing their breakfast.

"Say, boss," one of them called out, "you're not making that 8:30 train to New York?"

"Why not?" Quest asked, quickly. "It's only three-quarters of an hour's ride, is it?"

"Maybe not," the other replied. "but as it's eight now, your chances ain't looking lively. Kind of overslept, haven't you?"

Both men glanced once more at their watches. Then Quest thrust his back with a little oath.

"Our watches have been set back!" he exclaimed. "The Hands again!"

For a moment they looked at one another, dumfounded. Then Quest moved towards the corral.

"Say, is there any quicker way to the depot?" he inquired of the cowboys.

They heard his question indifferently.

"Fifty dollars," Quest continued, "to anyone who can take me by a quicker route."

One of them rose slowly to his feet. "Waal," he observed, "fifty dollars would come in kind of handy. Yes, I reckon I can cut off a mile or two for you."

"Fifty dollars for you, then," Quest replied, as they hurried towards the horses. "and an extra ten if we make the train."

They galloped off into the distance. The cowboys finished their breakfast and went off to their work. Laura stole out from her tent and started off in rather a shamefaced manner for a walk. Presently Lenora opened her . She, too, stretched out her hand for her watch. Suddenly she sat up in bed with a little exclamation. On the table by her side was a small black box. She took off the lid with trembling fingers, drew out a scrap of paper and read.

Fools! Tongues of flame will cross Quest's path. He will never reach the depot alive.

Lenora glanced at Laura's empty bed. Then she staggered to the opening of the tent.

"Laura!" she cried.

There was no one there. The cowboys had all gone to their work, Laura had passed out of sight across the ridge in the distance. Lenora staggered to the cook wagon, where the Chinese cook was sitting cleaning plates.

"Listen!" she cried. "They are in danger, the three men who have gone off to the depot! If you'll ride after them, I will give you a hundred dollars. Give them this," she added, holding out the scrap of paper.

The Chinaman shook his head. He glanced at the slip of paper indifferently and went on with his work.

ELECTRIC LIGHT BULBS.

Why the Delicate Filament Becomes Heated to Incandescence.

In the bulb of the ordinary electric lamp used chiefly for house light there is a thin filament of metal wound on what is called an arbor.

This filament is so prepared that it offers high resistance to the passage of the current of electricity, and because of this it is heated to incandescence when a current passes through it. All the air having been extracted from the bulb in its making, this prevents the metal from burning up, as it would do if oxygen were present.

Vegetable fiber was used for the filament of the first incandescent lamps. The next development was the cellulose process, which is still used in carbon and metalized lamps, although a number of processes are used now to improve the filament. The discovery that tungsten metal could be used for this filament in incandescent lamps was made as recently as 1906, and the first tungsten lamp was made in this country in 1907.

At first the tungsten filaments were composed of what was called tungsten paste that made an extremely fragile wire. The new process now used produces a strong wire under pressure, finer than the finest human hair. They run up to 5,000 candle power.

A SKELETON IN THE CLOSET

The Legend From Which the Well Known Saying Was Taken.

The origin of that singular and widely quoted saying, "A skeleton in the closet," which is found in almost every language in Europe, is found in one of those curious collections of stories that have come down from the middle ages. In one of these collections, compiled by an unknown hand about the middle of the tenth century, there is a story of a wealthy lady who, having a secret grief, confided it to a friend who was apparently a perfectly happy woman. She was the wife of a nobleman who lived in his castle in the south of France. She and her husband were outwardly on the most loving terms. Not a care cloud seemed to cast a shadow on her path.

After hearing the story of her afflicted friend the noble lady took her by the hand and led her to a secret chamber adjoining her bedroom, there opened the door of a closet and exposed a skeleton. "Know, my friend," she said, "no one is happy. Every day I am forced by my husband to kiss this grinning death head, which is that of a gentleman who was my husband's rival and whom I would have married had not my parents willed otherwise."

Dean Swift's Complaint.

It is no new thing, this complaint which one hears of the high cost of living. Writing to Stella from London in the year 1710, Dean Swift remarks: "I lodge in Bury street, St. James, where I removed a week ago. I have the first floor, the dining room and bedchamber at 8 shillings a week; plaguy deep, but I spend nothing for eating, never go to a tavern and very seldom in a coach, yet, after all, it will be expensive."

Soldiers and Mustaches.

The suggestion that soldiers should be clean shaven would not have commended itself to Victor Emmanuel II., who held it incumbent on a soldier to look ferocious. One of his first acts in assuming the royal dignity after the battle of Novara was to change what he called his "milkso's appearance" by applying black dye to his hair and mustache, which were naturally fair. This he continued to use until his death, always applying the dye himself, for he hated barbers or valets to come near him.—London Chronicle.

Hand Separator Cream.

Patrons of cream, gathering creameries, frequently complain of the variations which occur in the percentage of fat as revealed by the test of the cream delivered from time to time. These variations have given rise to more or less dissatisfaction on the part of the patrons, and have been the cause of unnecessary friction between them and the managers of creameries. A series of tests and experiments bearing on this point have recently been completed by the branch of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, of the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa, and the results obtained are published in circular No. 14 of that branch. It is desirable that creamery patrons should know the results of these experiments. Managers of the creameries may apply for and secure from the publications branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, sufficient copies to supply each patron. Individual copies will be sent to those who apply for them.

GRACE CHURCH.

"The last loaf" presented in Grace Church Sunday School rooms on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Mission Circle, was a marked success. The room was crowded. The drama itself was splendid and well rendered. Not only was it entertaining and therefore very interesting, but the moral of the play was excellent. So many of these plays are designed only to amuse, that it was very refreshing to hear one that contained not only the amusing but also the serious and instructive. The play was thoroughly enjoyed by both old and young. Surely the young people of Selby deserve unstinted praise, and if this is the character of their entertainments they will be welcomed at any time in Grace Church—$41.68. The music was fine, the solo by Mr. Paul and the selection by the soldiers was much appreciated. On Sunday evening the Pastor will speak upon the subject "The Soldiers in our midst! Is their influence good or bad? Our duty to them and theirs to us?" Is it Patriotism and Religion—which? The impression has been circulated that the Pastor intends to "Knock the boys on Sunday night." This was news to the Pastor. His own intention had been that while being frank and straight-forward, nevertheless, to point out that among these men were many noble fellows, and our duty was to do our best to

The Youth's Companion, Calendar For 1916.

The publishers of The Youth's Companion will, as always at this season, present to every subscriber whose subscription is paid for 1916, a Calendar for the new year. It is a gem of calendar-making. The decorative mounting is rich, but the main purpose has been to produce a calendar that is useful, and that purpose has been achieved.

News of the Soldier Boys.

Four new recruits were taken on the strength of the company this week.

Basketball nets have been placed in the armories and in a short time the soldier boys will be glad to arrange games with any town basketball team.

The canteen is flourishing. The men are issued blank cheque books for use in making purchases at the canteen and the amount of their cheques is deducted from their pay at the end of each month. The profits from the canteen will be used for the benefit of the regiment in purchasing comforts and extras.

The officers quartered here were invited to afternoon tea on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. F. F. Miller, to meet Capt. Hall.

Four new furnaces have been placed in the main floor of the armories to heat it.

The boys find the streets pretty muddy and the fields very wet for drilling and marching these days. The market is being used freely for platoon drill.

A number of the men are away visiting their homes on passes.

The Sergeants have fitted up comfortable quarters for themselves in the armories.

The officers at the armories will be glad to receive gifts of magazines and books and will see that any brought to the armories will be distributed among the men.

Col. Hamming is expected to visit the armories on Thursday.

Capt. Lockett was in Kingston on Wednesday evening.

XMAS SEAL CAMPAIGN FOR THE MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

8085 teachers throughout Ontario have had Xmas seals placed in their hands. 731 banks will shortly receive the seals. Some of the other organizations which are already at work are merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, real estate and insurance men.

Over four million Xmas seals have already been prepared and further issues are expected to follow.

The necessity of the Xmas seal campaign is clearly shown in the following statement, issued by the National Sanitarium Association:—

Tuberculosis killed 2204 persons in Ontario alone in 1913—one every four hours.

Tuberculosis kills one-tenth to one-seventh of all our people.

Tuberculosis kills one-third of all who die between the ages of 18 to 45.

Supplies of Xmas seals may be had by writing the Sanitarium Headquarters, 223 College street, Toronto, Ontario.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The subject of the soldiers in our midst! Is their influence good or bad? Our duty to them and theirs to us? Is it Patriotism and Religion—which? The impression has been circulated that the Pastor intends to "Knock the boys on Sunday night." This was news to the Pastor. His own intention had been that while being frank and straight-forward, nevertheless, to point out that among these men were many noble fellows, and our duty was to do our best to surround them with good influences. The only way to judge the sermon is to come and hear for yourselves.

WILSON-TOBEY.

New St. Paul's Church, Woodstock, was the scene of a fashionable and very pretty event, on Saturday afternoon, the occasion being the marriage of Edna Dorothy, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Rutan, to Archibald Grant Wilson of Montreal, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. L. Wilson, of Ingersoll. The service was fully choral, the bridal party being preceded up the aisle by the choir, of which the bride was formerly a member, singing the hymn, "The Voice that breathes O'er Eden." Miss Calla Hall presided at the organ and rendered the wedding march from "Lohengrin," as the bridal party entered the church and came up to the altar, where they were awaited by the groom and his best man, Leigh Wilson. The bride was brought in and given away by her uncle, W. J. Taylor, in the absence of her brother, Lieut. W. F. Tobey, who left recently for England with the overseas forces. Her wedding gown was a quaintly lovely creation of white taffeta, the skirt short and fashioned with panniers, and opening over a petticoat of white net, the bodice in Watteau shepherdess style with net frills and orange blossoms. The long court train was of brocade white satin with lining of fleshpink Georgette crepe, and the graceful veil was arranged with a wreath of orange blossoms. The bouquet was a shower of roses and lily of the valley. The maid of honor was Miss Jessie Robinson of Toronto, whose dainty little gown was of white silk net with a bodice of canary yellow velvet. Her hat was a tight little turban of soft yellow canaries' breasts and her bouquet was a lovely old-fashioned nosegay of tiny yellow roses and violets with an encircling frill of moss green chiffon. The ushers were John D. McLaughlin of Montreal and D. B. Taylor of Toronto, the bride's uncle. The impressive ceremony of the Anglican Church was performed by the rector, Rev. F. H. Brewin, and during the signing of the register the hymn, "O Perfect Love," was rendered by the choir.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, the invited guests being only relatives and a few very intimate friends. The bride's mother wore a lovely gown of blue faille combined with Georgette crepe, a black hat and a corsage bouquet of violets and roses. The groom's mother was handsomely gowned in rich gray velvet and wore a hat faced with pink.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left on the 5.13 train to spend their honeymoon in New York, the bride travelling in a smart tailored suit of olive green cloth, a black hat and moleskin furs. On their return they will live in Montreal.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Italians to Aid Balkan Campaign.

UDINE, Italy, Nov. 23.—(Via Paris)—Italian troops have begun landing on Albanian territory, according to a Chiasso despatch to The Journal La Suisse, forwarded by the Central News correspondent at Zurich, Switzerland.

An earlier despatch from Zurich stated that the allies' firm policy toward Greece had influenced Italy to decide to send a military expedition to the Balkans.

NO TREATING LAW MAY BE ASKED FOR

"No Treating" in a modified form will probably be a big liquor question with which the Ontario Legislature will be asked to deal at its session in February.

The liquor restrictions imposed on soldiers that they are allowed to visit bar rooms only between 5 and 8 p.m. each day works out very well except that in those hours their friends insist on treating. This phase of the generosity on the part of civilians has become so serious that the legislature will be asked to frame a law making it a criminal offence for a civilian to purchase liquor for a soldier in uniform.

4,000,000 BRITISH 6,000,000 RUSSIANS

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Earl Kitchener, the British secretary of war, in conversation with Greek officials in his recent visit to Athens, is reported to have declared that England will have four million soldiers under arms and will be in a position to arm and provision six million Russians, and that consequently it would show great stupidity to think the war could end otherwise than in complete defeat for Germany.

This information is contained in an Athens despatch to the Havas Agency, which adds that Lord Kitchener admitted that the declaration of war found the entente powers insufficiently prepared for so long a campaign, but said that the allies had known how to utilize the time that has since elapsed to complete their military preparations.

KINGSLEY STAMMERED.

And George Eliot Was a Bore, According to Mrs. Walford.

Mrs. Walford, the novelist, published some years ago a novel of memories of Victorian London, in which allusion is made to many persons in the world of letters. One of Mrs. Walford's acquaintances in the faroff days was Charles Kingsley:

"One day Charles Kingsley came in, and we had an opportunity of seeing if he were like his photograph which had been sent to Mary or not. To own the truth it flattered him, as he is so very red in the face, perhaps from leading an out of door life in all weathers.  In ordinary conversation Mr. Kingsley stammers a good deal; but, being conscious of it, he has taken pains to overcome the defect by speaking very slowly—almost too slowly, for when we heard him make a speech on one occasion we felt inclined to goad him on it became so tiresome."

"Tom Brown Hughes" Mrs. Walford described as "a man neither tall nor short, neither stout nor thin, with fair hair and blue eyes and a round, pleasant face."

In 1876 Mrs. Walford first met George Eliot at the house of John Blackwood in Edinburgh, and concerning that occasion she says:

"Much did I look forward to that evening, but—shall I confess it?—it ended in disappointment.  George Eliot, with her large head and rather horse-like face and portentous manner, was not to me an attractive personage.  I had been set down beside the guest of the evening at her request  and she had meant to be civil and kind. But how heavily drove the wheels of her chariot! How interminably dragged

British People Determined To Carry War Thru To End

LONDON, Nov. 22.—"The country is sound and it is determined to see this war thru to the end," said the Earl of Derby in talking to American correspondents to-day regarding the British recruiting campaign of which he is in charge. "The people are as determined to carry the war thru as they were in August of last year and we will win it."

That much Lord Derby said, he was willing to affirm as the result of the canvass of the country which he had been managing. More definite information he was obliged to withhold until the formal announcement of the results of the canvass, which would be made on Dec. 11. In accordance with that policy he declined to answer questions, whether responses had exceeded his expectations or otherwise, or to indicate whether the number of recruits obtained meets the requirements of the war office.

Lord Derby said it would be a great achievement if the nation carried the war to a successful end without compulsion. He attributed the previous failure of many to come forward largely to the fact that the necessities of the case had not been realized. The fact that Great Britain primarily was a naval power with the largest navy in the world and that the navy was doing all that had been expected of it, also he thought, had its effect on recruiting. He attached little importance to the few persons trying to discourage enlistments and he repeated with emphasis his conclusion that the spirit of the people is sound and that Great Britain and her allies will win the war.

PRISONERS OF HUNS TREATED AS CRIMINALS

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The British press bureau has published the reports of James W. Gerard, the American ambassador to Germany and members of the embassy staff in Berlin, relative to the condition of British prisoners of war in the camp at Wittenberg, Prussia.

Lithgow Osborne reported that his whole impression of the camp authorities were utterly unlike that which he had received in every other camp he visited. Instead of regarding their charges as honorable prisoners of war, he stated they apparently regarded them as criminals whom a regime of fear alone sufficed to keep in obedience.

"All evidence of kindly human feeling between the authorities and the prisoners was lacking," said Mr. Osborne, "and in no other camp have I found signs of fear on the part of the prisoners that what they might say to me would result in suffering for them afterwards."

WORSE THAN REPORTED.

The following extracts are taken from Ambassador Gerard's report:

"I regret to state that after a careful examination of the camp and long conversations with the prisoners, my impression is even more unfavorable than I had been led to expect."

"Upon my arrival at the camp I was not received by the general who acts as commandant, but by a major."

"There are over 4,000 prisoners in persons that what they might say to me would result in suffering for them afterwards."

WORSE THAN REPORTED.

The following extracts are taken from Ambassador Gerard's report:

"I regret to state that after a careful examination of the camp and long conversations with the prisoners, my impression is even more unfavorable than I had been led to expect.

"Upon my arrival at the camp I was not received by the general who acts as commandant, but by a major.

"There are over 4,000 prisoners in the camp, of whom 278 are British. Among these I found only 16 overcoats. The men, on the whole, are insufficiently clothed.

"The men told me that one of the British medical officers in the camp recently was struck by a German non-commissioned officer and this fact proved to be true.

"Many prisoners complained that dogs were brought in by German soldiers at night and that in certain cases prisoners had had their clothes torn by these dogs. I asked the authorities whether they considered dogs necessary for the preservation of order, saying that at no other camp had I seen dogs used for this purpose, and they informed me that they considered it absolutely necessary, and that dogs were needed to protect the German soldiers on duty. I was shown half-a-dozen of these dogs, which were of the usual type.

SACRIFICED TO DISEASE.

"Two prisoners informed me that the conditions in the camp had unquestionably improved during the last few months; that last year, when an epidemic of spotted typhus occurred, the camp conditions were indescribably bad. They said that they then implored the German authorities to put the British soldiers in barracks by themselves, as this was the only way to prevent an outbreak of the epidemic which had been brought to the camp by Russians. This request was refused on the ground that the British should learn to know their allies better. Largely because of this 50 British military prisoners and nine civilians died of the disease.

"The attitude towards the British prisoners seems to be based on suspicion. They have no opportunity for playing games or for exercise except walking. I am sending a check for 2000 marks to Capt. Vidal to be spent for immediate relief."

Sir Edward Grey, after commenting severely on the facts mentioned, says that he much appreciates Ambassador Gerard's action in visiting the camp personally, and asks Walter Hines Page to convey to Mr. Gerard his cordial thanks for the reports.

WEST WILL RAISE BANTAM BATTALION

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—An application has been received by Gen. Sam Hughes from Victoria, B. C., asking permission to form a Bantam Battalion for the front, enlisting only men who are below 5 feet 4 inches in height. The minister of militia at once acceded to the request.

Commanding officers have been appointed for every battalion now up to the 141st. These will be announced shortly.

It was stated that if the method of recruiting battalions and sending them forward as units instead of splitting them up into drafts had been adhered to from the first there would now be 200 regiments fully recruited and officered by the Dominion.

FINANCE MINISTER'S APPEAL

Hon. W. T. White has issued following appeal in connection with the war loan:

"The Canadian war loan is offered for public subscription. Particulars of the price and terms of issue with full information as to mode of subscribing are contained in the prospectus which appear on page 5 of this issue. The government cordially appeals to the Canadian people to support this loan and to further demonstrate the strength and solidarity of the Empire and our invincible determination to prosecute the war to a victorious conclusion."

Men on Guard Duty Will Go To Front

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 21.—"Men who are doing guard duty in Canada are going forward or going out," said Sir Sam Hughes this evening. He intimated that he expected them to list for overseas service and that places as guards will be taken whenever possible by returned soldiers who are incapacitated for active service.

There are about ten thousand men doing guard duty throughout the Dominion.

ISSUE OF $50,000,000 5% BONDS MATURING 1st DEC., 1925

PAYABLE AT PAR AT

OTTAWA, HALIFAX, ST. JOHN, CHARLOTTETOWN, MONTREAL, TORONTO, WINNIPEG, REGINA, CALGARY, VICTORIA.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY—1st JUNE, 1st DECEMBER.

ISSUE PRICE 97½

A full half year's interest will be paid on 1st June, 1916

The proceeds of the loan will be used for war purposes only

In the event of future issues (other than issues made abroad) being made by the Government, for the purpose of carrying on the war, bonds of this issue will be accepted at the issue price, 97½, plus accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscription to such issues.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith on behalf of the Government the above named Bonds for subscription at 97½ payable as follows,—

10 per cent on application,
7½ " " " 3rd January, 1916,
20 " " " 1st February, 1916,
20 " " " 1st March, 1916,
20 " " " 1st April, 1916,
20 " " " 1st May, 1916.

The instalments may be paid in full on and after the 3rd day of January, 1916, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Applications, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. The bank will issue a provisional receipt.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principle and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch of any chartered bank in Canada, and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Scrip certificates payable to bearer will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds without coupons.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada.

Holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds with coupons, payable to bearer or registered, without payment of any fee, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert, without fee, into fully registered bonds without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Applications will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto stock exchanges.

The loan will be repaid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications which bear their stamp.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 30th November, 1915

GREEK CRISIS SAFELY OVER ALLIES' VIEW

SALONIKI, Nov. 22, via Paris, Nov. 23.—In view of the improvement in the relations of Greece and the entente powers, Danys Cochon, minister without portfolio in the French cabinet, abandoned his purposed trip to the front and left yesterday on board a Greek cruiser for Athens.

From a person who is in a position to be fully informed on the situation the Associated Press learns that King Constantine assured Earl Kitchener, the British secretary of war, that he had never considered disarming or interfering entente allied troops who might take refuge on Greek soil, though a number of Austrians, including several officers, are now interned in Greece.

TO REMEDY "MISUNDERSTANDING."

Respecting the friction that has arisen between Greece and Great Britain and the coercive measures which the British insist in no sense constitute a blockade, it was stated the king regards this situation as the result of a misunderstanding, and easily remediable.

Greece is ready to ensure the entente allies that her only purpose of maintaining troops in Macedonia is the legitimate necessity of self-preservation, especially in the event the allies decide to abandon their Balkan expedition, leaving Greek Macedonia at the mercy of the victorious Bulgarians with their army already in the field.

NO DEMOBILIZATION YET.

As the statements of the French and British respecting a serious continuation of the Balkan campaign leaves Greece in doubt on this point, it was said there is no present possibility either of the demobilization or withdrawal of the Greek troops from Saloniki. But the moment the allied forces operating in this field assume proportions sufficient to guarantee a serious prosecution of the Balkan campaign, rendering Greece's own defence in Macedonia superfluous, the king will not refuse to consider demobilization, or at least the withdrawal of the Greek troops from Saloniki, if their presence is regarded as embarrassing to the movements of the allies. It is likely that a solution of the Greco-British differences will be reached along these lines, it was said.

PLEDGE GIVEN KITCHENER BY GREEK CABINET

PARIS, Nov. 22.—An Athens despatch to the Havas Agency says:

"After Premier Skouloudis called on Lord Kitchener, the British secretary for war, at the British legation yesterday, the field marshal had a two-hours' conference with Gen. Dousmanis, chief of the Greek general staff, and Col. Metaxas, chief assistant on the general staff, at which the officers accompanying Lord Kitchener were present.

"Great importance is attached to this conference in political circles

The government organ Embros affirms that the king and the Greek Government yesterday gave Lord Kitchener formal assurances that Greece in no case would take measures hostile to the quadruple entente, and that a conciliatory solution of the present differences would be reached.

"The Embros adds that those who had the opportunity of seeing Earl Kitchener after his visit to the king and Premier Skouloudis brought away the impression that the questions now in suspense have lost much of their acute character.

"The statements made by the Embros are not confirmed from any official source. Lord Kitchener and his staff left Athens late Saturday night."

GREAT DAY OF GOD ALREADY BEGUN

We Who Know This Should Walk Worthy of Our Vocation.

Responsibility of Enlightened Christians—Present Heavens and Earth About to Be Dissolved—Not Literal Heavens or Literal Earth, but Symbolic—Shaking Process Already Begun—"Peace! Peace! When There is No Peace"

PASTOR RUSSELL

Nov. 14.—Pastor Russell gave an impressive discourse here today. His text was, "Seeing that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the Day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?"—2 Peter 3: 11, 12.

The Pastor suggested that the phrase, "Hastening the preparation for the Day of God," gives more nearly the Apostle's thought than does the Common Version rendering; for it is apparent that we cannot hasten that Day, since the Divine Plan was fixed before the foundation of the world. We can hasten our preparation for the things coming, however. The Day of the Lord is now present. It is necessary for us to realize what manner of persons we should be and then to be such persons—faithful to the Lord in all things, giving as much time as possible to the perfecting of ourselves and to the upbuilding of one another in the most holy faith.

St. Peter is not speaking of the literal heavens and earth, but of the symbolic—the present ecclesiastical and social organizations. The Prophet Zephaniah (1:14-18; 3:8, 9) also speaks of this great burning time of the Day of the Lord. Even now the present heavens, the nominal church systems, are in much distress. Both preachers and people are wondering what these things mean that are taking place. They have been declaring that the world is growing better, that soon all will be converted through the churches. They have been saying, "Peace! peace!" But instead have come riot and war. There has been no real peace. (Jeremiah 6:14-19.) The only ones who have such a basis are those Christians who are hearkening to God's Word.

Life is a battle. All mankind are more or less contentious to have the best they can get. The true Christian's fight is with himself—against selfishness, against a strong desire to follow his own natural inclinations. He finds much to contend with in the meanness of the fallen nature. The world, on the contrary, imagine that many of these traits are praiseworthy. But the Lord gives His children different instructions. He is offering them a great prize—glory, honor, immortality, joint-heirship with Christ in the Heavenly Kingdom.—1 Corinthians 2:9; 2 Peter 1:4

"I have been restored to health by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I became very weak, had frequent dizzy spells and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints and my hands swollen.

A friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and from the outset, they did me good. After I had started the second box, I felt I was getting well and I persevered in the treatment. I can truthfully say that 'Fruit-a-tives' is the only medicine that helped me.

NAPOLEON'S MAXIM.

It Can Be Traced Back to Tacitus' In the Second Century.

Napoleon's maxim was, it is said, that Providence is on the side of the big battalions, but by what right it has become the property of the "little corporal" is not quite clear. Though he may have acted upon it, he did not invent it, and it is his merely by right of conquest.

In the first place, we can trace it back to Tacitus, who in the fourth book of his history, written somewhere in the second century, says, "Deos fortioribus adesse" ("The gods are on the side of the stronger"). From Tacitus we jump to M. Bussy-Rabutin, a French litterateur, who lived in the seventeenth century. "God is generally on the side of the large battalions against the little," he wrote. From him or more probably from her mother wit Mme. de Sevigne, his contemporary, wrote, "Fortune is always on the side of the largest battalions."

Some fifty years later came Voltaire who wrote in a letter to M. le Riche, "It is said that God is always on the side of the heaviest battalions." That letter was written in 1770, when Napoleon was but one year old. Thus we come to him whose maxim it is said to be, but here the reference looks both

SPOTS ON THE SUN

The Way They Affect Our Soul of Light and Heat.

POINT TO THE GRAND CLIM

When Darkness and Cold Shall Overtake Our Planet and Smother It, the Chill of Death—Their Effect Upon Climatic and Weather Conditions.

The return of sun spots is a phenomenon that astronomers always regard with great concern. They come floating back once in about every eleven years. It takes on the average five and a half years for them to reach maximum of numbers, when the sun is seen to be more or less speckled every day, and six and a half years decline again to a minimum, when months in succession the sun's face as clean as a polished mirror. Upon the whole the heat on the earth, during its entire surface into account, basing the observation on the temperature of the atmosphere, is about degrees of the Fahrenheit scale lower at sun spot maximum than at sun spot minimum.

This cannot be wholly due to the darkening of the sun caused by the presence of the spots, since, as Mr. G. Abbott of the Smithsonian Institution has shown, the amount by which the temperature is lowered is fifty times too great to be accounted for that way.

But there are other ways in which an invasion of a horde of spots on the sun makes its effects felt upon the globe. The most conspicuous of these is in connection with the earth's magnetism.

The earth is a great magnet, and the sun appears to exercise a direct influence upon its magnetic state, that influence varying with the condition of the sun as to spottedness. When sun spots are at a maximum, magnetic storms of great violence occur, during which the electro magnetic excitement of the earth is vividly manifested—the atmosphere by imposing displays of the aurora borealis, and in the earth itself by vagabond currents which interrupt telegraph and cable communication, and sometimes leap into visibility in the form of crackling sparks and electric flames playing about the instruments.

Occasionally it has been possible to trace phenomena of this kind to the influence of individual sun spots of unusual magnitude and activity. It is like the transmission of a shock from the sun to the earth, across a gap of 93,000,000 miles, supposed to be filled with nothing but the invisible and intangible ether.

Exactly how the forces that produce spots upon the sun affect the earth's weather is an unsettled question. There is a considerable amount of evidence for saying that such storms, our western tornadoes, the hurricanes of the West Indies and the typhoons of the China seas are far more numerous during sun spot maxima, and especially during the time that the spots are increasing in numbers. It has also been thought that wet and dry seasons are connected in some way with the sun spot cycle, but on this subject the

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 22.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the continued limited supply of butchers' cattle of a suitable quality coming forward caused a stronger feeling today and prices for good cattle scored an advance of 2 or 3 cents per 100 pounds, but there was no change in the market for canning stock, offerings of such being large. The demand for canning stock was active for both local and American account, and sales of round lots of cows were made at $3.15 to $3.35, and bulls at $3.75 to $4.25 per 100 pounds. There is an enquiry here for a full cargo of choice cattle for shipment to France, which may result in some business being done in that direction shortly.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for lambs, but the feeling is strong. The demand is good for sheep. Calves continue firm, milked stock selling at 7c to 8c per pound and grassed at 3c to 6c.

Hogs were stronger with prices up 25c to 50c per 100 pounds. The demand from packers was good and an active trade was done in selected lots at $9.75, sows at $7.75 and stags at $4.25 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

Dressed hogs were in demand for shipment to Quebec.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.50; do, medium, $6 to $6.50; do, common, $4.75 to $5.75; canners, $2.15 to $4.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6 to $6.25; do, medium, $4.75 to $5.25; milkers, choice, each, $8 to $90; do, common and medium, each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70; sheep, ewes, $5.75 to $6; bucks and culs, $5.25 to $5.50; lambs, $5.50 to $6.50; hogs, $9.75.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 22.—Cattle.—Receipts, 7000 head; slow, lower; prime steers, $5.60 to $9; shipping, $6.30 to $7.50. Butchers, $6 to $8; heifers, $6.30 to $7.25; cows, $2.75 to $6.50; bulls, $4 to $7; stockers and feeders, $2.25 to $6.75; fresh cows and springers, $50 to $75.

Veals—Receipts, 1200 head; active and steady, $4 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 24,000 head; active and lower; heavy and mixed, $6.60 to $6.70; yorkers, $5.75 to $6.65; pigs, $5.75 to $6; roughs, $5.40 to $5.50; stags, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 10,000; active, higher; lambs, $6 to $9.25; yearlings, $5.75; weathers, $5.75 to $6; ewes, $3 to $3.50; sheep, mixed, $5.50 to $7.75.

He Stood.

It happened in a crowded Market street car one evening recently. A gallant passenger shifted his bundles, arose, pretended to take off his hat and said to an equally if not more burdened female standee, "Won't you take my seat, madam?"

"Oh, thank you so much!" cried the lady. "I'll take the seat with pleasure, but I don't want you to stand up."

"Gee, lady," he grinned, blushing. "I'd like to accommodate you in both ways, but what would the people think if you was to sit in my lap?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

selfishness, against a strong desire to follow his own natural inclinations. He finds much to contend with in the meanness of the fallen nature. The world, on the contrary, imagine that many of these traits are praise-worthy. But the Lord gives His children different instructions. He is offering them a great prize—glory, honor, immortality, joint-heirship with Christ in the Heavenly Kingdom.—1 Corinthians 2:9; 2 Peter 1:4.

Incomparable Value of These Riches.

The speaker then discussed the value of this prize, and the terms upon which it will be granted. Those who have accepted the Divine offer must become copies of our Lord Jesus Christ. (Romans 8:29.) Were they to set their hearts upon earthly things, they would surely lose the prize. (Colossians 3:1-3.) In the time of our Lord's Second Presence His saints will be glorified with Him.

God's people look from the Divine standpoint at the dissolving of all things pertaining to this present Dispensation. The only thing that will not be shaken down and dissolved is the Kingdom of God. (Hebrews 12:25-29.) Everything unjust, untrue, imperfect, will be removed in this final shaking. These imperfect things will be consumed in the great symbolic fire. The newspapers say that there is a great conflagration in Europe—the present war. The things of the Present Order—ecclesiastical, social, financial, political—will become "as the chaff of the summer threshing floor, and the wind shall carry them away" forever.—Daniel 2:35, 44.

Then the New Order will come in. The true Church of God will be the "new heavens"—all of God's saints. There will be a "new earth"—a new social order. This will gradually bring in perfection. Mankind will be delivered from sin and death. Christ Jesus will always be the Head of the Church, although after their glorious change (1 Corinthians 15:51, 52) the Church will not need the robe of His righteousness—imputed justification. The change of the Church, the speaker believes, to be very near.

Character-Traits Necessary to Saintship.

The remainder of the discourse was devoted to character development. God's people hope to attain the character-likeness of Christ. He had the Father's spirit in all things. He made the Father's will His own. So are they to do. They are to have the mind of Christ.—Philippians 2:5.

The Scriptures instruct us that the Lord's Spirit manifests itself in meekness in our intercourse with the brethren, in a humble appreciation of self, in contentment with whatever God gives us, in a delight to have Christ as our Teacher. God is now calling only those possessed of a strong individuality and a love for righteousness. They must have real character, a strong will, trained to full obedience to the Lord.

British House of Lords.

The British house of lords is composed of peers, who hold their seats, first, by hereditary rights; second, by creation of the sovereign; third, by virtue of office (English bishops); fourth, by election for life (Irish peers); by election for duration of parliament (Scottish peers). The full assembly would consist of 3 princes of the blood, 2 archbishops, 22 dukes, 23 marquises, 124 earls, 40 viscounts, 24 bishops, 334 barons and 16 Scottish and 28 Irish representative peers; total, 616.—Exchange.

century. God is generally on the side of the large battalions against the little," he wrote. From him or more probably from her mother wit Mme. de Sevigne, his contemporary, wrote, "Fortune is always on the side of the largest battalions."

Some fifty years later came Voltaire who wrote in a letter to M. le Riche. "It is said that God is always on the side of the heaviest battalions." That letter was written in 1770, when Napoleon was but one year old. Thus we come to him whose maxim it is said to be, but here the reference books help us but little and help Napoleon less.

"Providence is always on the side of the last reserve," is given as his version of the trite phrase, and even this is not credited to him freely, but only "attributed to Napoleon I."—Westminster Gazette.

MEANING OF "JITNEY."

There Are Many Theories as to the Origin of the Word.

The meaning of the word jitney is a five cent piece. The origin of the word rests wholly on supposition, and many explanations are given. One interested in the subject gathered the following information: A correspondent from Soda Creek, B. C., said he knew the term as slang in Glasgow, Scotland, over fifty years ago. It was used to designate something small or insignificant. The word was said to come from the Scottish "jitty," which means deception, and the French "nilsey," correctly "nials," meaning a ninny or simpleton.

Another correspondent said it is a foreign word which originated in Russia as the name of a small Russian coin. A Russian scholar, however, declares there is no such coin and that the word in Russian means "rye."

A correspondent from Tacoma, Wash., says the word "jit," meaning a five cent piece, can be traced back a hundred years and was the original word used by slave traders for that coin.

An Oakland, Cal., correspondent said that jitney is a word coined by the southern negroes. There the small boy when told to run an errand says, "Do I get a jitney, boss?"

A Los Angeles man says that the term is Mexican vernacular for nickel.—Philadelphia Press.

Clever Hen.

One of England's sporting peers is the Earl of Norwich, and they tell a story about an answer which his lordship once gave to some one who had chaffed him about some of his hunting yarns.

"Yes," he replied, with a smile. "I admit that some of them were rather tall yarns. I outdid the wandering hen. A hen, you know, set out to see the world and met a crow in a distant wood."

"But," said the crow, 'are you not afraid, without good wings, of losing your way in all this tangle?"

"Afraid? Not I," replied the hen. "Every yard or two I lay an egg to guide myself back by."—London Globe.

Exactly how the forces that produce spots upon the sun affect the earth's weather is an unsettled question. There is a considerable amount of evidence for saying that such storms: our western tornadoes, the hurricanes of the West Indies and the typhoon the China seas are far more numerous during sun spot maxima, and especially during the time that the spots are increasing in numbers. It has also been thought that wet and dry seasons connected in some way with the spot cycle, but on this subject the evidence is contradictory. Some statistics show that dry seasons accompany spots and others that wet seasons accompany them.

But all of these things are really little account in comparison with the great question of the effects produced upon the sun itself. The earth is a speck in the infinite vault of space and we are animated atoms living the fraction of a moment upon the insignificant speck. Of how great a sequence in the vast scheme of creation can the little questions that relate to our ephemeral comforts? If a sun flame should lick us up and disappear from the universe, practically considered, would be of less importance than that of the minute drop of water from the ocean. But the sun should disappear there would be a star gone from heaven. A part of the universe at least would not be its absence. Whatever threatens the existence of the sun, then, has an appreciable importance. The astronomer finds that the sun spots are symptomatic of progressive changes which will eventually bring the sun's career to an end, and so he studies them for the sake of finding out merely how they may affect our petty affairs. In order to trace for his intellectual satisfaction the grand phenomena of the life and death of a star. And doing that he is pursuing the course which can rescue man from oblivion, offsetting his material insignificance and nothingness with the relative greatness of his mind.—Garrett Serviss in Spokane Spokesman-view.

The Blue Heron.

Notwithstanding the nature falcon who write wonderfully unsound natural history, the heron does not prey with its bill (nor does the loon) bites them, nips them between the sharp mandibles. We have had captured herons and have seen thousands of ones all over this continent, and they do not do the silly trash told of them by the nature fakirs.

Some of the nests are as big as small haystack, built upon year after year until they reach enormous weights, very often up to 500 pounds Onting.

Good humor and generosity carry day with the popular heart all the world over.—Alexander Smith.

Sultry Muscat.

The sultan of Muscat rules what probably the hottest country on earth. A fifteenth century traveler wrote Muscat, "The heat was so intense that it burned the marrow in the bones, sword in its scabbard melted like wax and the gems that adorned the harem of my dagger were reduced to cinders. Possibly a little exaggerated. Still, thermometer has registered 189 degrees in the sun in Muscat and 107 degrees even at night, so the visitors are grateful for those grapes that Muscat chews by the sweat of its brow.

SUN SPOTS ON THE SUN

Way They Affect Our Source of Light and Heat.

INFLUENCE OF THE GRAND CLIMAX

In Darkness and Cold Shall Overtake Our Planet and Smother It in a Chill of Death—Their Effect Upon Climatic and Weather Conditions.

The return of sun spots is a phenomenon that astronomers always regard as a great concern. They come flock-back once in about every eleven years. It takes on the average four or a half years for them to reach a maximum of numbers, when the sun then to be more or less speckled every day, and six and a half years to come again to a minimum, when for months in succession the sun's face is clean as a polished mirror. Upon the whole the heat on the earth, taking its entire surface into account and making the observation on the temperature of the atmosphere, is about 1 1/4 degrees of the Fahrenheit scale lower on a spot maximum than at sun spot minimum.

This cannot be wholly due to the cooling of the sun caused by the presence of the spots, since, as Mr. C.
Abbott of the Smithsonian institution has shown, the amount by which the temperature is lowered is five or six degrees too great to be accounted for in this way.

There are other ways in which the invasion of a horde of spots on the sun makes its effects felt upon our earth. The most conspicuous of these is in connection with the earth's magnetism.

The earth is a great magnet, and the spots appear to exercise a direct influence upon its magnetic state, that influence varying with the condition of the sun as to spottedness. When sun spots are at a maximum, magnetic storms of great violence occur, during which the electro magnetic excitement of the earth is vividly manifested—in the atmosphere by imposing displays of aurora borealis, and in the earth by vagabond currents which interrupt telegraph and cable communication, and sometimes leap into visible in the form of crackling sparks and electric flames playing about the wires.

Occasionally it has been possible to trace phenomena of this kind to the presence of individual sun spots of unusually magnitude and activity. It is the transmission of a shock from the sun to the earth, across a gap of 90,000 miles, supposed to be filled with nothing but the invisible and in-ferable ether.

Exactly how the forces that produce sun spots upon the sun affect the earth's magnetism is an unsettled question.
There is a considerable amount of evidence for saying that such storms as western tornadoes, the hurricanes of the West Indies and the typhoons of China seas are far more numerous during sun spot maxima, and especially during the time that the spots are increasing in numbers. It has also been noticed that wet and dry seasons are affected in some way with the sun spots, but on this subject the sci-

EVENTS IN BASEBALL.

Jimmy Galvin Pitched the First No Hit No Run Game.

Salaries first were paid to ball players in 1868 by the Cincinnati club.

Roger Connor, the famous old slugger, in 1,071 games in ten consecutive seasons had a grand batting average of .325.

Richard J. (Dickey) Pierce is credited with introducing the bunt hit in the summer of 1876.

The first 1-0 game on record was played by the Chicago and St. Louis teams in 1875, the former winning the contest.

O. Nicholson holds the record for the greatest number of stolen bases in a season. When with the Frankfort team of the Blue Grass league in 1912 he pilfered 111 sacks in 123 games.

In 1913 the Meridian team of the Cotton States league was defeated in twenty-six consecutive games, the record.

The first no hit game, no player reaching first base, in the history of baseball took place in 1876. James Galvin of the St. Louis Reds was the record making twirler, and he pitched against the Cass club of Detroit. The battle took place at Iona, Mich., on Aug. 17. The feat was repeated twice in 1879 by J. L. Richmond of the Worcester National league outfit on June 2 against Chicago, and on July 26 against Springfield. Again, on June 12 1880, Richmond performed the same stunt against Cleveland, and in the same year, on June 17, John M. Ward, twirling for Providence, beat Buffalo in this kind of a contest.

No additions were made to these names until May 5, 1904, twenty-four years later, when D. T. ("Cy") Young of the Boston American league team defeated the Athletics in a no hit, no player reaching first, game, and A. Jos-simarily beat the White Sox when he twirled for the Cleveland American league club on Oct. 2, 1908.

SWING OF THE WIND.

On the Atlantic Coast, as a Rule, It Is From Left to Right.

Thirty-five years ago, while making a four months' voyage, I was frequently impressed by the unerring accuracy with which Captain Crosby one of the best known captains sailing from New York, forecast the state of the weather. In reply to my question he answered: "Doctor, as a result of fifty years of seagoing life, I can assure you that almost invariably, I might say without exception, the wind in its shifting follows the course of the hands of a clock—that is, from left to right.

"Of course," he added, "one cannot say how long the wind will remain in any one quarter, but when it changes it will, almost without exception, take the course I have stated. For instance if the wind is in the northeast, instead of going to the north and then to the northwest, it will on the contrary go over to the east, southeast south, southwest, west, and finally reach the northwest."

When I asked him why that should be, he said he had never been able to obtain an answer to that, but that it was an absolute rule as far as the experience of his life went.

Victor Emmanuel's Mustache.

The first ruler of United Italy allowed his mustache to attain such a length that in his later years he would never eat anything at a public banquet. When taking food he was obliged to tie the ends of the mustache behind his head, and he would not appear in this undignified attitude in front of people not belonging to his circle of intimacy. After a visit he paid to England, Harriet, Duchess of Sutherland, wrote: "Victor Emmanuel is the only

Power of Lyddite.

Lyddite is a very stable compound.
It can be hammered or burned in the open without danger, and it requires a fulminate or more powerful explosive to set it off. Lead picrate is the usual agent employed. But here is an odd point about lyddite—it must not be left in contact with iron or steel. If this is done the picric acid combines with iron rust to form a very dangerous compound. Consequently all shells used to contain lyddite are first carefully tinned on the inside. Lyddite is six times more powerful than the common shell filling.

FARM BOYS IN BASEBALL.

Managers Think They Outclass the City Bred Youngsters.

"The other day I inquired of a major league manager what class of young men he wanted for his team," writes Hugh S. Fullerton in Farm and Fireside.

"Give me the farmer," he replied instantly. "The chances for his falling victim to the temptations of baseball are fewer. He may not be as well posted as to city ways, but in one sesson you cannot tell the difference.
They come larger, stronger, live cleaner and think more clearly than city boys do. Besides, the majority of them have the right idea in view. They want to get money to buy a farm.

Wills In Ancient Greece.

Wills were introduced into Athens by Solon, though in many other parts of Greece they were discontinued. Diogenes Laertius gives copies of the wills of several celebrated men, such as Plato, Aristotle and others. Before Solon's law no man was allowed to make a will, the wealth of the de- ceased belonging in certain proportion to the members of his family and even after Solon only an Athenian citizen had the privilege of bequest, the es- tates of both slaves and foreigners being confiscated for the use of the pub- lic.

How Toucans Roost.

Nothing could be more eccentric to our eyes than the way in which tou- cans go to roost. The bird does not "tuck its head under its wing, poor thing!" and so settle down, but packs itself up in most orderly fashion. The tail is turned forward over the back, in the soft feathers of which the giantic bill is hidden. Then the tail shuts down, all semblance of a bird is lost, and one can see nothing but a ball of feathers.—London Standard.

WHERE THE MAIDS WOO.

Capturing a Husband in India Is an Ordeal at Times.

It would be a great mistake to imagine that there are no countries where the bashful bachelor does not have to wait and be wooed.

Is the Torres Straits islands, for in- stance, it is the height of bad form for a young man to make the first ad- vances in wooing. Even after the pre- liminary steps, which consist of the exchange of bracelets, everything is not plain sailing. A girl sends a mes- sage to a young man to meet her, and if all goes well she urges him to name the day. When matters have gone as far as this it is no longer necessary for him to play the part of the modest violet, and he replies, "Tomorrow, if you wish." Then they go home and tell their relatives, who promptly cele- brate the occasion by a general melee.

Among some of the rude tribes of India the woman's courtship is a less agreeable experience. If the man of her choice does not respond she takes a jar of rice beer and sits down in his house. The women of the family know what the rice beer means, and if they do not want the marriage to "come off" they are allowed to use any means short of personal violence to eject the fair wooer from their doors. They may put pepper in the fire, drench her with water, or load her with opprobrious epithets, but to gain the man of her choice the lady has only to hold out for some two or three hours and the bridegroom is hers. — Detroit Free Press.

THE WAR POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT

War, the great revealer, has been exercising its speciality on the Borden Government. The war has been in progress some fifteen months and at no time during that period has the Government shown anything but a laggard response to popular ideas.

The policy of let-well-enough-alone has drifted insensibly into a policy of wait-and-see, with the result that the Government has been at least twenty minutes late on all good works. Little by little, however, they are taking up with most of the ideas which they repudiated in 1911, or immediately afterwards, and may, as a consequence win a tardy reputation for common sense. Liberal criticism spurs them on, and much spurring is needed.

For example, there was the scandalous revelations of the Public Accounts Committee and the Davidson Commission which grew out of them, an old story now, but worth recalling to point out that it was the Liberals who egged the Government on to active repentance. Since that episode was closed the gravest scandal in sight has been the Shell Committee. As constituted by Sir Sam Hughes it consisted of about equal parts of technical experts who might know something about shells, and manufacturing persons who might be willing to accept contracts. Everybody knew that was the wrong way to build a Shell Committee, but it remained for Lloyd George's Commissioner, Mr. D. A. Thomas, to prove it.

Mr. Thomas is one of the thirty richest men in Great Britain. Presumably he knows, though he may not practice, the methods of Big Business. So when he came to Canada and looked at the Shell Committee he recognized at a glance what was the matter with it. He soon shook the worm out of that nut by converting the Shell Committee from an institution for private profit into a legitimate munition industry conducted under the supervision of the British Government. The principle underlying Mr. Thomas' changes in the Committee was the belief that the peril of the British Empire ought not to be the prey of looters and that a fair profit of say ten per cent. was all that good patriots were entitled to ask of a traffic which was then bearing anywhere from one hundred to five hundred per cent.

Since Mr. Thomas went away it is currently reported that shell manufacturers are not so keen about contracts now that riches beyond the dreams of avarice are no longer possible in that direction. The allies are getting on their feet in the matter of shell production and the grafters in Canada and the United States can no longer take advantage of England's first fierce necessity, to plunder her. Meanwhile there is no doubt that great fortunes have been made in Canada out of the shell industry, and it is now up to Finance Minister White, by retroactive legislation if necessary, to absorb, say half the excess charges for the common weal.

If the Finance Minister does his duty in this respect he will probably get enough money to pay the interest on the war debt for the next five years. This would be even better than giving the tariff another squeeze—which by the way it can hardly stand—or imposing a federal income tax which would be hard to bear, and still harder to collect. Another alternative is to single tax all vacant land held for speculative purposes. But there is really no need to suggest alternatives because the Conservative Government will be fertile enough in tax expedients.

In fact taxes are the first thing they think of—taxes that can be spread over the people and will not burden their own rich friends too heavily. The other night at a patriotic meeting in Toronto, when people were promising this and promising that, all sorts of sacrifices in fact, Premier Hearst arose and in the heat and glow of debate and made a promise for Ontario—new taxes. That was the only thing he could think of—it popped into his mind quite naturally. Similarly at Ottawa there will be no lack of taxes. The Government will think of them even before it thinks of retrenchment, although in some departments of the Civil Service there are three men on one man's job and the poor fellows are fairly tripping over each other.

Another case of sack cloth and ashes, donned late in the day, is the Government's admission, not by words, but by deeds, that submarines can be built in Canada. This they strenuously denied in 1910 when they were fighting the Naval Service Act, but they acknowledge it now. In fact they have acknowledged it any time for the last twelve months back because Mr. Charles Schwab and others have been building submarines at Montreal for at least that long. These submarines have not only been built but have crossed the ocean and are doing duty in the North Sea, the English Channel, the Dardanelles, and the other places where they are most needed. Their pictures have walked boldly into the Conservative newspapers and nobody seems ashamed of the fact that submarines are made in Canada, or doubts that Canada can keep on making them as long as necessity exists.

Still another Winter garment of repentance is the increase of Canada's contingent from one hundred and fifty thousand to two hundred and fifty thousand which was brought about not by the force and energy of the Government, but by the chindings of the Liberal press and the ringing protests of Mr. Rowell.

Invariably it has fallen to the Liberal Opposition to point out to the Government its duty and just as invariably the Government has done its duty, when there was nothing else to be done. It was also due, under Providence, to the Liberals, that much red tape was cut and that the new recruit now draws a uniform before his own cloths are worn out, and the returning hero gets a cordial, official welcome, even if he doesn't get a job. It's bad enough, of course, to have no jobs ready but if it hadn't been for a little intelligent criticism of Government shortcomings there wouldn't even have been a welcome. The Government has recently appointed a handshaker, extraordinary and plenipotentiary, Mr. W. K. George, and he is doing his duty splendidly.

The Greenland Shark.

The Greenland shark is well known as a foe to whalers. It will follow a dead whale to the ship and show no fear of the men while they are engaged in cutting up the prey, biting out lumps from it as big as a man's head. Sometimes it happens that a man will fall off the slippery side of the whale close by the shark, but the latter never attacks him, being intent upon gorging itself with the flesh of the cetacean. The most severe wounds from thrusts of the whalers' knives will not persuade it to desist. This species of shark is often partly or wholly blinded by a parasitic worm three inches long which fastens itself at the corner of the eye and lives on its fluids.

A Too Late Young Man.

An east side youth, who is notoriously careless about the house, the other day laid a lighted cigarette on the window sill and burned the varnish. Then he slipped in the hall, kicked the rug to the front porch and did not replace it.

"Do you know," said his indignant sister, "that you were born 100 years too soon or too late?"

"Why?" asked the young man.

"Because," answered the sister, "had you been born a hundred years ago they would have had log furniture which you could not mar, and had you been born a hundred years hence, there would be steel furniture which would not likely show the effects of your carelessness."—Columbus Dispatch.

Needle Dust.

In factories where needles are made the grindstones throw off great quantities of minute steel particles, with which the air becomes heavily charged, although the dust is too fine to be perceptible to the eye. Breathing the dust shows no immediate effect, but gradually sets up irritation, usually ending in pulmonary consumption. Ineffective attempts were made to screen the air by gauze or linen guards for nose and mouth. At last the use of the magnet was suggested, and now masks of magnetized steel wire are worn by workmen and effectually remove the metal dust before the air is breathed.—London Graphic.

LIVING YOUR LIFE.

Live your life while you have it. Life is a splendid gift. There is nothing small in it. For the greatest things grow, by God's law, out of the smallest. But to live your life you must discipline it. You must not fritter it away in "fair purpose, erring act, in constant will," but must make your thought, your words, your acts, all work to the same end, and that end not self, but God. This is what we call character.—Florence Nightingale.

THE ETERNAL FEMINE.

Fashions of 4,000 Years Ago Come Back Into Style.

Fashions 4,000 years old are now being revived, according to archaeologists who have made studies of women's dress down the ages. A echo well versed in the characteristics of the great civilization which has been laid bare by the excavations in Crete in the last 15 years, was strolling down the avenue the other afternoon when he stopped in amazement before the window of a well-known Fifth avenue costumer. There, on form in the show window, was one of the newest fashions—a bodice drawn to fit tight about the waist, with deep V at the throat and a high collar rising behind the neck, and a flaring skirt with four or five ruffles flaring over each other in almost a shape of a bell.

"Amazing!" he exclaimed to his companion. "Almost an exact repetition of the faience figures of the civilization which Sir Arthur Evans discovered at Knossos!"

The companion, who had never heard of Sir Arthur Evans, Knossos or an earth goddess, demanded that he be shown; so the archaeologist took him back to his study and showed him there a little figure—a copy of the original found in Crete which had a strange similarity to the waxen lady in the window. This was a short-sleeved, tight-waisted bodice of dark orange, with purple ribbons; a heavy belt; and a flaring skirt with seven flounces, made in checkerboard pattern of dark purple and light blue.

"That lady," said the archaeologist, "is either the earth goddess or one of her priestesses, and the figure was made probably 2,000 years before Christ. It was found in the ruins of the capital of the Cretan kingdom, which was contemporaneous with the palmy days of Egypt and Babylon."

"This gown is a fair specimen of the general style of the dress of the Cretan woman of the upper class. The flaring skirt, the narrow waist, the low-cut corsage—these are practically constant characteristics. They often wore transparent waists with heavier jackets over them, the general effect being strikingly modern."

"Hats were usually made without rather low crowns and wide brims, but, while in classical Greece a Rome there was little variation in that model, the Cretans had about many kinds and conditions of hats any age up to the present. Usually the brim was turned up before or behind, or all around, and there was considerable use of ribbons and other trimmings. A conical hat surrounded by a rolled brim and decorated with three rosettes sounds modern, but the model is 3,400 years old."

"Cretan women usually wore their hair in long ringlets down on their shoulders, generally leaving a decorative curl on the forehead, which combined with their big, dark eyes must have had a positively irresistible effect."

"The Cretans were expert shoe makers, too—far ahead of any other ancient people; and the elaborateness of their dress shoes found hardly a

Mechanism of These Fearful Sub-

DEATH IN THEIR WAR HEADS.

Where the Great Charge of Guncotton Is Carried and How It Is Exploded—Speed With Which These Tubes of Terror Are Propelled.

There is a missile about seventeen feet long, cylindrical in shape and eighteen inches in diameter, that contains within the small space of its head the power to destroy thousands of lives and sink the greatest of ships. That missile is the torpedo. Such is the weapon of the submarine.

In times of peace, its exercise head filled with water, the torpedo is harmless enough. But in the tube of a submarine, ready for action, its bronze war head containing about 200 pounds of guncotton, it becomes the most feared and most destructive weapon in naval warfare.

So that you may appreciate the merits of each and understand the various functions of these torpedoes, I will briefly describe them.

Torpedoes are divided into three principal parts, the head, the air flask and the afterbody. The war head is made of bronze and carries a charge of about 200 pounds of guncotton. There is fitted into the war head a small mechanism called the war nose, the function of which is to fire the guncotton charge when the torpedo strikes the object.

The war nose has generally three or four arms, which aid the torpedo in cutting through nets or fire the charge in case the torpedo should strike a glancing blow. In times of peace steel exercise heads are carried for the purpose of practice and, as they are filled with water, are entirely harmless.

The head is fitted by screws to the air flask, a hollow cylindrical tube about eleven feet long and used for storing compressed air, the motive power of the torpedo. Every ship and destroyer carries machines for compressing air, but submarines usually have their flasks charged alongside a parent ship or at a base.

The flasks are charged to about 2,100 pounds pressure per square inch, and this is reduced by a valve to an engine working pressure of about 500 pounds, depending, of course, upon the speed. In order to get the greatest possible range with the limited supply of compressed air, the air after being reduced to a given pressure is superheated to give greater expansion and consequently greater speed.

The afterbody of a torpedo contains the working mechanism—engines, gyroscopic steering apparatus and the attached engines which control the rudders.

The torpedo can also be adjusted previous to firing to run at any desired depth beneath the surface of the water. The armor belt of most battle-ships extends about six or eight feet below the water line, and the torpedoes are generally adjusted to run at a depth which would strike the enemy ship just below the armor belt.

Before a torpedo is placed completely in its tube all adjustments are made so that it will run as desired. The torpedo

THE STRAIN ON OUR EYES.

Modern Conditions, Not Poorer Vision, Necessitate Glasses.

The question, "Are our eyes weaker?" is frequently asked by people who observe closely and who are dismayed by the remarkably large number of people who wear glasses today as compared with a generation or so ago. Our eyes are not degenerating. The eyes of the present generation are in no wise poorer, weaker or inferior to those of our ancestors, notwithstanding the fact that a far greater percentage wear glasses than formerly.

The probabilities are that the eyes of the human race are neither weaker nor stronger today than were those of our forefathers, unless it can be proved that the whole physique of the race today is weaker or stronger. As is the whole physical body, so are the eyes.

But much more is required of our eyes now than was ever required of our ancestors. The strenuous struggle for existence today, the ever increasing complexity of our modern civilized life, the multiplying knowledge of the world in all lines of human endeavor, knowledge that must be mastered if we would rise and achieve success, put far greater strain on the eyes of this generation than on those that have gone before.

Our schools are far more exacting and severe, the business and scientific world require closer application and more painstaking care than ever before. Electricity has turned night into day, and much more work is now done by artificial illumination than in the past. Sharp competition in every line makes it necessary to have the best vision obtainable.

Because of these exacting demands on our eyes, latent imperfections, errors of refraction, causing eye strain, are brought out and made manifest by symptoms of discomfort and distress, compelling us to seek the improvement of vision and the comfort afforded by properly fitting lenses.—Journal of the American Medical Association.

Fashions of 4,000 Years Ago Coming Back Into Style.

Fashions 4,000 years old are now being revived, according to archaeologists who have made studies of women's dress down the ages. A scholar well versed in the characteristics of a great civilization which has been laid bare by the excavations in Crete the last 15 years, was strolling down the avenue the other afternoon when he stopped in amazement before the window of a well-known fifth avenue costumer. The flaring skirt, the narrow waist, the low-cut corsage—these are practically constant characteristics. They were transparent waists with heavier jackets over them, the general effect being strikingly modern."

A conical hat surrounded by a rolled brim and decorated with rosettes sounds modern, but the model is 3,400 years old."

"Cretan women usually wore their hair in long ringlets down on the shoulders, generally leaving a devastating curl on the forehead, which, combined with their big, dark eyes, must have had a positively irresistible effect."

"The Cretans were expert shoemakers, too—far ahead of any other ancient people; and the elaborateness of their dress shoes found hardly any parallel in the subsequent history of the world until the epidemic of black and side lacings and colored scrollwork decorations, which fell on New York this spring."

"How about men's clothing?" the scientist was asked. "If women are coming around to the Cretan fashions, are not the men of our day likely to do the same?"

The scholar threw up his hands. "God forbid!" he cried. "In times of peace the men of Crete wore nothing much but shoes, a belt, and a loin cloth."

Motor Laundries in the War.

One of the most progressive things in the war is the motor laundry for field hospital corps. It consists of four cars, the leading one being a powerful motor truck which carries the movable steam mangle. The second car has the complete steam outfit—boiler, machinery—also a drying cabinet and a disinfecting tank. The third car contains the washing machine, the drying drums, pumps for hot and cold water, and a condenser for steam in case the only available water is too hard for washing. The fourth car or truck brings along all the washing necessities—soap, soda, coal, gasoline, and tools. When stationary the trucks are formed in a horseshoe and covered by a tent. The motor when free of the mangle runs to and fro to gather up the soiled linen. Most of the things are wrung almost dry in the mangle, but the "woolies" want gentler treatment, so they are put in the drying cabinet which is heated by the motor.

How to Become a Cartoonist.

"How can I become a first class cartoonist?" asks a youth. Well, my lad, first get a haircut and discard your bohemian tastes. Try to be just a plain, ordinary, everyday mortal. Get the measure of your head and stick to that size hat. Your skull is without doubt composed of a hard substance called bone, though if you give heed to public flattery or the eulogies of friends it is liable to turn into rubber. This sudden derangement is apt to prove a dangerous drawback to your progress. Aside from this, you'll need a sufficient amount of talent, plenty of ambition, a happy disposition and an occasional lead pencil.—Zim in Cartoons Magazine.

The Farthing Is Mighty.

The significance of the farthing has always been clearly realized by the big men of finance. Grant Duff records how the late Lord Rothschild when some one expressed contempt of the difference of a farthing in the value of certain gold coins quietly remarked, "This young man has evidently no experience of large financial transactions." W. H. Smith, too, the founder of the famous bookseller's, knew the value of the despised coin. When a customer spoke of striking the odd farthings off his accounts he told him, "Sir, this business has been built up almost entirely on farthings."—London Standard.

The armor belt of most battleships extends about six or eight feet below the water line, and the torpedoes are generally adjusted to run at a depth which would strike the enemy ship just below the armor belt.

Before a torpedo is placed completely in its tube all adjustments are made so that it will run as desired. The torpedo is expelled from the tube by compressed air, and as it passes out a "starting lever" is thrown back, which allows the compressed air within the air flask to pass through the valves, reducing it to the engine working pressure and then to the engines.

The torpedo now takes full control of itself and runs at the desired depth, speed and distance to the target.—Rush M. Hoag in Leslie's Weekly.

If It Only Were.

Little Johnny was sorely troubled one morning. Prohibitions great and small met him at every turn. It was "no" to this and "no" to that till at last he began to cry, angrily exclaiming to his mother between sobs, "I wish 'no' was a swear word, mamma, so you couldn't say it."—American Boy.

East Indian Proverbs.

An old English proverb, "Cut your coat according to your cloth." The following is a similar proverb in India: "Look at your bed before stretching your legs on it." "Don't ask for sauce in a free boarding house." is another Indian proverb, which is something like the English proverb, "Beggars must not be choosers."

To Make Bandages.

Bandages can be prepared from the good parts of worn sheets or pillow slips if perfectly clean. Rolls six to eight yards in length are most convenient—one inch wide for fingers, two inches for feet, two and one-half to three inches for head and arms and four inches for legs. A good way of keeping them in condition for use is to seal the rolls in a perfectly clean glass fruit jar.—Philadelphia Record.

A Little Sarcastic.

Maid (to lady at door)—Mrs. Spencer is not at home. Caller (who knows differently)—Oh, I'm so sorry! But never mind. Tell Mrs. Spencer when she comes in that I called to say that I'm awfully glad she goes out more than she did. I've always wondered why she kept herself cooped up in the house all the time.

Another Face on It.

"We ran across an old friend of yours the other day."

"Who was it, and where did you meet him?"

"It was Mr. Toddler, and we didn't exactly meet him—he wouldn't get out of the way."

Pipes Frozen by Warm Spells.

It is a curious fact that water pipes under ground will often freeze during the warm spell that follows a cold snap. The explanation made for this interesting phenomenon is that after a cold wave a large quantity of heat is taken from the ground in the work of changing the frozen moisture into water, and thus, on the principle of the ice cream freezer, the pipe is chilled, enough heat being taken from it to freeze it.

The importance of producing largely and at low cost, is not likely to be overlooked on the farm. But, after all, the question of success or failure on the farm turns on the selling end.
The Weekly Sun, in its market reports and in its suggestions, as to cooperation in selling, has very greatly helped progressive farmers in this important particular. Its editorials are always instructive and are never turned to suit the "Interests." The Sun will make a very useful and most acceptable Christmas present.

SEXSMITH-McMATH.

The Sexsmith-McMath action for malicious prosecution was before Chief Justice Falconbridge in Toronto on Wednesday, in Trial Court.

Sexsmith v. McMath.—W. B. Northrup, A.C., for plaintiff. D. L. Mc-Carthy, K.C., and J. English (Napanee) for defendant. Action to recover $10,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution.

Judgment Plaintiff failed utterly in proving want of reasonable and probable cause. Action dismissed with costs. Judgment for defendant for $25 on his counter-claim for his expenses incurred in recovering possession of his bull after plaintiff's conversion thereof, with costs. Fifteen days' stay.

Soldiers Club.

The Soldiers Club opened Saturday night and if one can judge by the members present every evening it seems to be a success. Thanks to the generosity of some of the town ladies and the untiring efforts of the furnishing committee we have been able to give the club a very cozy and home like air. We wish to thank the mayor for kindly allowing us to use some of the chairs from the Town Hall. We also wish to thank St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and St. Mary Magda-lene's Church for very generously offering us the use of their basements for our club room before we were able to secure our present quarters, we have also to thank the following merchants for donating towards the club.
Sproule Bros., A. S. Kimmerly & Son,
Boyle & Son, A. E. Paul, Daly Tea
Co., J. L. Boyes, and W. J. Foster and Mr. Herbert Daly for donations of a ton of coal each. The Napanee Water Works Co. has very kindly given us the free use of water as long as the building is used as the soldiers club.

Tea Given by the Morven Ladies.

The tea given on Thursday, 18
inst., by the ladies of Line 76, Morven for the Daughters of the Empire and Committee, was well attended and enjoyed by all. The proceedings open with the salutation of the flag of the Empire, after which the Regent, Mr.
Harshaw, welcomed the visiting ladies of Morven. A poem by Wm. Fris-Campbell, "Edith Cavell" was read by Miss Locklin. The Regent read letter

A hearty vote of thanks, moved by Mrs. Finkle and seconded by Mr.
Boyes, was given to the Morven ladies, whose generous and delicious refreshments were appreciated by all.
Two quartettes "God Bless the Prince of Wales" and "Knitting" were sung by Misses Wilson, Paul, Nesbit, and Light. After a vote of thanks, moved by Miss Heck and seconded by Mr.
W. A. Templeton, to the vocalists who passed, the gathering was brought to a close by the singing of "God Save the King," and the British Women National anthem. The C. M. B. room kindly loaned for the occasion was gay with bunting and flags.

Seasonable Hints, No. 3.

"The real test of the farmer is, per- haps, in his ability to make the most profitable use of the various products of his farm and his foresight in get- ting ready in every way practicable between harvest and seed time for the productive operations of the next season." Thus states Mr. J. H. Gris- dale, director, Dominion Experiment- al Farms, in presenting seasonable hints, No. 3, for November, December, January and February, to the farming public of Canada. A careful perusal of its sixteen pages will amply reward the stockman, the agriculturalist, the horticulturalist, the poultryman, the tobacco grower and those especially interested in bees. A feature of this third issue is the advice under the caption "Shelter the Implements." The enormity of the vast sum of money spent annually on farm machi- nery is impossible of realization. To equip an average farm with machinery costs about $1,000, which under ordi- nary conditions of treatment will not do good work for more than five years. To counteract this waste, for unsheltered implements means waste, shelters should be built. A working plan of a shed 25 by 47 feet outside measurements is given, with directions necessary for its construction. A care- ful study of this plan, which, as stated, is capable of many modifications, will be helpful to those intending to build. To those, therefore, who would have a compendium of information, which outlines many necessary fall and winter duties pertaining to agricul- tural in all its phases, Seasonable Hints, No. 3, is available on applica- tion to The Publications Branch, De- partment of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ontario.
